$3,000,000 Allotted for District Alley Dwelling Unit

Approval Said to Await Only a White House Announcement,

Half to Be Spent Here by July 1

Capital Exempted by Housing Act From 10 Pct. Contribution.

Approval of a $3,000,000 allocation to the District Alley Dwelling Authority last night apparently lacked only an official announcement from the White House.

The $3,000,000 would be used to remedy housing conditions here—conditions which Mrs. Roosevelt described as "deplorable" in a speech Monday night.

More than half of the total allocation, which would come from United States Housing Authority funds, will be spent here before July 1, it was understood.

D. C. Escapes Conribution

It was reported that in approving the allocation, known to have been under his consideration for some weeks, President Roosevelt doubled the estimate of the Budget Bureau.

This was denied last night by Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the Budget Bureau, who asserted that he had "made no estimate" as yet.

Because of a special provision of the housing law, the District itself will not be obliged to make the 10 per cent contribution exacted from other municipalities which benefit from housing authority funds.

John Ihlder, head of the District Alley Dwelling Authority, to whom word of the allocation came as a surprise, declared that it "will enable us to go ahead with a considerable part of our program."

Ihlder pointed out that 176 squares with inhabited alleys still exist in the District. The $860,000 which has already been spent by the authority has resulted in the reclaiming of 11 squares, he said.

He declared that his agency in-

Roosevelt Housing Plan Held Up After Row in Committee

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Banking Committee sent the new housing program to a sub-committee for study yesterday after a stormy sessio in which Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, offered to resign the committee chairmanship.

Wagner asked the full committee to take up immediately the amendments to the nationa housing act, which are designed o put into effect President Roosevelt's suggestions for a home-building boom.

When there was objection, the New York Senator was said to have told committee members he felt any vote to send the amendments to a sub-committee would be a vote to humilitate me publicly" because of the delay involved.

Members protested they did not want Wagner to resign and the controversy died down with Wagner's appointment of Senator Bulkley, of Ohio, as sub-committee chairman.

Dazed by Crash, Motorist Flings Self Under Train

A few moments after his automobile had crashed into an abutment on Riggs road, just off Rock Creek Church road, Tisdell S. Smith, 40, of 810 Forest drive, Hyattsville, Md., hurled himself to death beneath a south-bound Baltimore & Ohio express train late yesterday.

Witnesses told police Smith, apparently dazed after his car had failed to make a turn and struck the abutment, climbed from the front seat and wandered up the embankment to the B. & O. right-of-way.

Ardent Roosevelt Man Wins Boston Place in Congress

Boston, Dec. 14 (AP)—Massachusetts' thickly populated Eleventh Congressional District today chose State Representative Thomas F. Flaherty, 39, an ardent new dealer, as its U. S. Representative in a special election to fill the seat vacated by John P. Higgins (Democrat).

In the preponderantly Democratic district, Flaherty defeated John F. Cotter, Republican nominee, who was Higgins' former secretary.

Flaherty, who polled 14,441 votes to 5,606 for Cotter, hailed election as an indorsement of President Roosevelt's program.

South Counts 204 Votes to Bury Pay Bill

By Sidney Olson.

Southern Democrats who lead opposition to the wage-hour bill feel certain of pledged votes of 135 Democrats to recommit the measure, it was learned last night, after general debate had roared to a close.

Their movements guarded in the tightest possible secrecy, but working under generalship of Representative Sam D. McReynolds, of Tennessee, the group perfected an organization during the day, and sent a whip and a half-dozen subwhips through cloakrooms to round up recommittal votes.

The 135 Democrats expect to be joined by 69 or 70 Republicans in their attempt to send the bill back to committee.

Absentees May Decide.

This total, of 204 or 205 votes for recommittal, falls short of the numerical majority of the House, which is 218. Success of their attempt thus hinged on the possibility that a dozen or more regular absentees from the House may be joined by an equal number who may find it inconvenient to vote on this bill.

Representative Eugene E. Cox, Rules Committee member (Democrat), Georgia, who predicted last August that his committee never would report out a rule allowing the wage-hour bill to reach the floor, yesterday flatly asserted the bill will be recommitted. Cox, who made a dramatic assault on the measure in debate yesterday, later said:

"This bill is going to be sent back to committee before this week is over. Some of the 33 Republicans who voted the other day to discharge the bill from the Rules Committee will come back with the rest of their party, while a lot of on-the-fence Democrats are going to realize that this bill needs a lot more study before passage."

Close Vote Forecast.

Cox said more than 100 Democrats would vote to recommit the bill. McReynolds preferred not to make an estimate but said the vote to recommit would be "very, very close."

House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas, asked about the recommittal vote, said that in his opinion it would not be very close—"not nearly as close as the 10-vote margin on the farm bill last week." The House majority whip, Pat Boland, of Pennsylvania, also held there would be a comfortable margin of safety.

It was believed neither knew of the organization of the opposition or of the claimed pledged votes for recommittal.

The six hours of general debate expired in the House late in the afternoon, featured particularly by a violent attack on the bill by McReynolds, who said:

"The gentlewoman from New Jersey (Labor Committee Chairman Mary T. Norton) said yesterday that Apologies Insufficient.

By Franklyn Waltman.

The United States Government is not satisfied with Japan's apologies over the sinking of the American gunboat Panay but wants formal assurances that definite and specific steps have been taken to insure that American citizens, interests and property in China will not be subjected to attack or unlawful interference by any Japanese authorities or forces whatsoever.

This was revealed at the State Department yesterday as the third Japanese apology was received over sinking of the American gunboat and the bombing of three Standard Oil tankers by Japanese aircraft in the Yangtze River Sunday. Secretary of State Cordell Hull declined to regard this third Japanese apology as a reply to the formal note of protest which he directed to the Nipponese government Monday night.

Fourth Apology Likely.

The Japanese note, signed by Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, was handed to American Ambassador Joseph C. Grew in Tokyo before the latter had a chance to present this Government's formal protest. So it now appears that the Japanese will be required to present their apologies for the sinking of the Panay a fourth time.

But this Government expects them to do more than that. In the note of protest which went forward Monday night and was made public yesterday, this Government called on the Japanese for the following:

"A formally recorded expression of regret.

"An undertaking to make complete and comprehensiye indemnifications.

"An assurance that definite and specific steps have been taken which will ensure that hereafter American nationals, interests and property in China will not be subjected to attack by Japanese armed forces or unlawful interference by any Japanese authorities or forces whatsoever."

The Japanese Foreign Minister anticipated the first of these two points. In his note he presented

Robinsons' Passports Bogus, Inquirers Find

Associated Press Photos.

Secret Agent Rumors Linked With Couple Who Vanished Mysteriously in Moscow; Used Names of Citizens Dead 25 Years.

The elements of a mystery thriller were provided by the State Department yesterday when it revealed that Mr. and Mrs. Donald Louis Robinson, who dropped from sight in Moscow several days ago, were traveling on fraudulent American passports.

The names used by the couple in obtaining their passports belonged to persons who died in childhood 25 years ago, and the true identity of the vanished pair and their nationality have not been ascertained. Nor has the Soviet government given any information as to their whereabouts.

The cleverness of the fraud and the mysterious disappearance gave rise to all sorts of speculation, such as that the couple might be secret agents of some government seeking information regarding the Soviets and the current "liquidation" of spies in Russia.

Inquiry Also a Mystery.

Why the State Department should have made an investigation into the validity of the passport applications likewise remained a mystery. But it was rumored the inquiry was instituted because Soviet officials seemed sure the couple were not Americans when Secretary of State Cordell Hull called upon Soviet Ambassador Alexander Troyanovsky Saturday to provide information regarding the Robinsons.

The State Department yesterday issued this statement:

"It has been established that the American passports which on April 6, 1936, were issued in the names of Donald Louis Robinson and Ruth Norma Robinson were issued on the basis of documents belonging to other persons who are now deceased.

"The Department is not aware of the true identity or nationality of the persons who bear these passports."

No Record of Couple.

Behind that statement was a series of events which provide an intriguing mystery. Several days ago a woman representing herself as Mrs. Robinson informed American newspapermen in Moscow that her hus-

G. O. P. May Put 200 on Policy 'Group of 100'

10 Bodies Due to Be Represented by Selections.

St. Louis, Dec. 14 (U.P.).—The executive committee of the Republican National Committee, meeting in all-night session here, has increased its proposed program committee to draft new party principles to 200 members, a reliable informant said last night.

Membership of the committee, expected to be completed early Wednesday, will be representative of ten groups. According to the informant, they will be apportioned as follows:

Agriculture, 25; manufacturers, 15; commerce, 15; labor and labor relations, 25; publishers and editors, 25; professional groups, including lawyers, 20; educators, 25; social welfare, 10; finance, 15; miscellaneous, 25.

It was announced earlier the executive committee had abandoned election of a chairman for the policy committee to go ahead with the work of selecting members for the committee.

Leaders worked feverishly all day in going through the list and tonight announced the number of prospective committeemen from every part of the country had been whittled to fewer than 300.

A still greater factor was the difficulty in making selections suitable to followers of both former President and former Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas.

With United States Naval Forces near Hohsien, China (Wednesday), Dec. 15.—This correspondent and three others were aboard the United States gunboat Panay when she was bombed, attacked by machine gunners in Japanese launches, boarded by Japanese military forces and sunk.

We were picked up today by the British gunboat Bee after escaping last Sunday afternoon from the doomed Panay, attacked for the first time about 1:30 p. m., abandoned about 2:05 p. m., and sunk at 3:54 p. m.

The newspapermen with me are Norman Soong, of the New York Times; G. M. McDonald, of the London Times, and Luigi Barzini, of the newspaper La Stampa, of Turin, Italy.

Craft Machine-Gunned.

After the first bombing, two Japanese motorized flatboats—used as landing craft by the Japanese army—machine-gunned the Panay.

Japanese officers then boarded the ship but left her before she sank.

(Earlier reports had said the Panay was boarded by Japanese military forces shortly before she sank, but today's dispatches were the first to mention the fact that during the bombing and just before abandonment of the Panay, sinking with colors flying, the American ship had been machine-gunned at close range by other than aerial forces.)

The Panay's colors were clearly visible during the entire time of the attack. United States flags were flying on the four ships—the Panay

Japanese Wipe Out Wedding Party as Fireworks Go Off

Waichow, China, Dec. 14 (AP).—Chinese tonight reported Japanese bombing planes had wiped out a wedding party in a village near here, apparently because of a tragic coincidence.

As five Japanese warplanes flew over the village, the reports said, the wedding guests were shooting firecrackers and discharging cannon, their time-honored way of celebrating.

The Japanese fliers, apparently believing they were being fired upon, dropped two bombs. The bridal couple, their parents and some relatives and friends were killed. The ancestral hall and several other houses were destroyed.

11 Persons Living on Relief in Two Rooms Joined by 10 Members of Evicted Family

WHEN THE CK FAMILY was evicted, all ten of its members went to live with some friends. That put 21 persons in two rooms, and there they are now.

No. 16—The CK Family.

The Post today presents one more case from the 28 neediest families of the District's unemployed employables for whom its Christmas fund is being collected. There is no regular relief fund for these people. They are deserving cases, investigated by an agency of the Council of Social Agencies. Their need is measured in terms of money. Unless they are helped now, the amount they need later will be much larger.

The friends, it happens, are on relief. Not only is there an insufficiency of beds in the two rooms. There is hardly enough floor space for the quilts they spread out.

Mr. CK has a truck and until recently has been able to support his family on a marginal level by picking up odd jobs about the city. He is also a moderately good painter and plasterer.

He has been on WPA at various times, but always quit when he had a chance to pick up more money "on the outside" in private industry.

There have been cases of juvenile tuberculosis among the eight CK children and there are several cases of rickets in the family now. Malnutrition, doubtless, has been a contributing factor to this.

Since Mr. CK has his truck and is eligible for WPA—in case the WPA is able to take on more workers—it will not take as much to get his family back in its own rooms as it required for the HE family presented yesterday.

Case workers estimate that $100 would stake the CK family for two months. It is believed that with proper expenditure of this amount and "good luck" in job matters, it will be self-supporting at the end of that time.

Would you like to add your bit toward re-establishment of this family?

An additional $99.65 was sent in to The Post's Christmas Fund yesterday. (List of contributions on page 8.) This brings the total to date to $1,756.40.

War Referenda Petition Gets Total of 218 Signers in House

A three-year dream came true for Representative Louis Ludlow (Democrat), Indiana, last night, when just before the House adjourned, the 218th name was signed to his petition to discharge from the House Rules Committee a constitutional amendment providing for national referenda on war.

As bewildered by the news as were the House leaders, but for far different reasons, Ludlow at last saw his goal in sight—a chance "for the people to take over the power to make war."

Ludlow's amendment has been locked up in the House Judiciary Committee for almost a year. Last February he filed a petition to discharge the Rules Committee from consideration of a rule to allow the bill to reach the floor, but signatures were slow in coming.

Yesterday, when 215 signatures were on the bill, House Whip Pat Boland, of Pennsylvania, was asked whether the majority leadership was going to move quickly to scratch signatures from the petition. He said gloomily: "I suppose so, but I'm afraid it's too late."

Less than five minutes later, Representative Dudley White (Republican), Ohio, signed as No. 218.

A peculiarly tangled parliamentary situation developed at once, as Chairman John O'Connor, New York, of the Rules Committee, took the floor to condemn the petition system, shouting:

"The Rules Committee never heard of this bill until now. How in the name of anything can we be discharged from a bill we never heard of? How can we be discharged from a bill that has never

House Tax Unit Acts to Enforce OfficialRulings

Revenue Officers Would Be Prevented From Altering Advance Advice.

Revising administrative provisions of the revenue structure to eliminate taxpayer uncertainties on complex problems, the House tax subcommittee yesterday agreed to make advance decisions by the Internal Revenue commissioner binding in future rulings.

So-called "declaratory judgments" on special tax cases presented to the bureau in advance by taxpayers now may be later modified or reversed. Chairman Fred M. Vinson said the sub-committee agreed taxpayers should be assured the bureau would stand by such advance rulings.

Having voted this aid to the individual taxpayer, the sub-committee took steps to assure collections by the Treasury from corporations in dissolution. It provided returns must be filed by a corporation within three months after it goes out of business. Vinson said this would enable the Treasury to get its claims in before assets are distributed.

The sub-committee also decided to levy interest charges from dates of assessment of tax deficiencies rather than from dates of notices of assessment, if deficiencies are not paid shortly after receipt of notices.

Relief for American oil seed crushers, finding it difficult to compete with oils imported from seeds crushed abroad, also was voted by the committee. It worked out new compensatory rates to be applied on oil seeds, to equalize rates between imported oil seeds and imported oil.

Instead of the prevailing tax of 2 cents a pound, the sub-committee tentatively agreed to the following rates:

2 Labor Units Ask Security Changes

By the Associated Press.

Both the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization will ask Congresss this winter to make far-reaching changes in the social security act.

The A. F. of L. announced yesterday it would proposed four major amendments:

1. To extend both the old age pension and unemployment insurance provisions to cover all workers.

2. To require the States to give unemployment insurance benefits to workers engaged in "legitimate" strikes.

3. To fix the minimum old age pension at $30 a month for anyone who has paid taxes for five years.

4. To eliminate employe contributions to unemployment insurance funds.

A proposal by Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers, to use the old age reserve funds for a vast housing program tops the C. I. O. program.

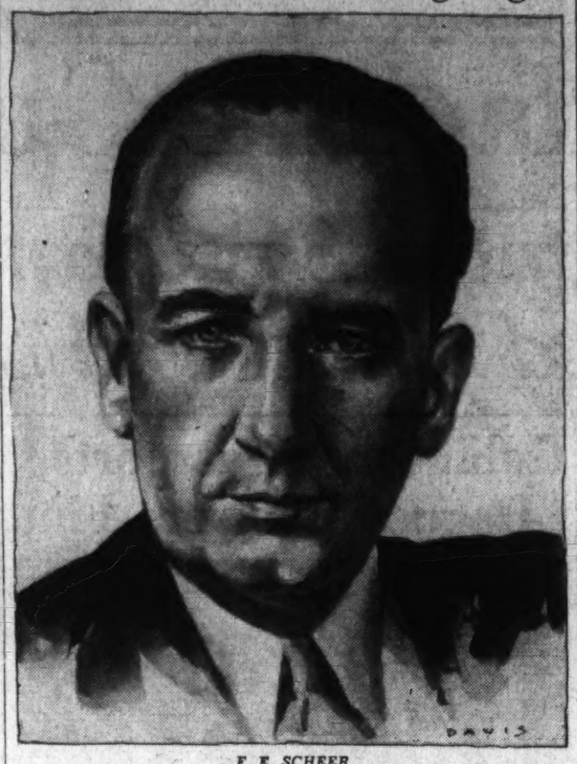
Working for Washington

Scheer, Northeast Civic Chief, Would Limit 'No Parking' Signs



F. E. SCHEER.

Conference President Holds Streets Are Made to Be Used Even in District and Police Should Concentrate on Saving Life.

By Christine Sadler.

On his "must" list for general improvement of Washington, Andrew F. E. Scheer, president of the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations, places the following:

Consolidation of all police forces now operating in the District . . . reorganization of the city's traffic regulations, throwing a goodly portion of them overboard . . . more boys' clubs . . . no more Zoo buildings until "we get some more school buildings" . . . local suffrage . . . less expenditure for District parks . . .

Scheer, an attorney for the Internal Revenue Bureau, probably feels strongest about the boys' clubs and the traffic situation.

Critical of Police.

"Our streets are so cluttered up with signs and yellow paint they look like circus billboards. I believe 90 per cent of our no-parking areas should be eliminated. The policemen who are now busy putting tickets on parked cars could then apprehend traffic violators who are endangering life.

"Streets were made to be used, even in Washington. I think we should have right-angle parking on Constitution avenue. Why not?"

In connection with his interest in boys' clubs, Scheer believes that the school gyms of the District should be open to boys and girls of the city every day in the year. By this method the District would get better returns on its investment and juvenile workers would be aided, he argues.

"Give the boys and girls good wholesome sports and we will need less police, jails and penitentaries," he declares.

Holds D. C. "Park Poor"

Speaking from the viewpoint of a business man who likes to see property on the tax rolls, Scheer maintains that the District is "park poor".

His conference objected to a low-cost housing project in its area for much the same reasons. "We did not like to have that much property there and not have it in the taxable list. Furthermore we would not have been able to regulate any provisions connected with the project," he says.

President Scheer would like to see a stadium on East Capitol street and he is one of the group of Washington residents who can see no legitimate excuse for the District budget "going to the Federal Budget Bureau". He thinks it should go straight to Congress, since Congress is the District lawmaker.

Eleven citizens' associations are members of the Northeast Conference. They are: Brookland, Burroughs, Chillum Heights, Dahlgren Terrace, Kenilworth, Lincoln Park, Bladensburg Road, Michigan Park, Stanton Park, Trinidad and the newly-organized Metropolis group.

From these member bodies come several of the outstanding delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Cites Northeast Growth.

Scheer has taken a leading part in civic enterprises of the District for several years and is especially well known for his work with traffic committees. He is a charter member of the Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association, of which he was president three terms.

He has been president of the conference since its organization four years ago and has been a delegate to the federation since 1927.

He believes the Northeast section of the District is fast becoming "the most up-to-date residential area of the city." Apartment building is flourishing in that vicinity, he points out.

Scheer is a native of Iowa but has lived in the District since 1914. When he first came to Washington he studied in various schools at George Washington University and held several accounting and auditing jobs before he entered Government service.

His wife is the former Margaret L. Bell, of Washington. They live at 1224 Saratoga avenue northeast and have one daughter who is a student at G. W.

Friday—Mrs. Ella M. Thompson, president of the Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Save Principle Of Profits Tax, Eccles Pleads

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors, Federal Reserve System, said today he would urge that changes in undistributed profits and capital gains tax laws be made only after careful consideration of such reforms as would make them more equitable and improve the mechanism without prematurely abandoning the principle.

Addressing the annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation, Eccles declared he would be the last to contend that these levies were perfectly drafted, but he disagreed with those who believed the business recession could be attributed primarily to these taxes.

Would Correct Evils.

The undistributed profits tax was designed, Eccles asserted, to correct evils appearing in the economy of the twenties and in more recent years, such as avoidance of individual surtaxes in the upper-bracket incomes through nondistribution of profits, the piling up of corporate earnings which resulted in an expansion of business combinations and a reduction of competition.

"It would be well to consider how this tax can be made to function more equitably," he said, "particularly with respect to small business.

Defends Gains Tax.

"Likewise, while I agree that the capital gains tax should be improved, we should remember that this tax is designed simply to make effective the progressive taxation of income in accordance with ability to pay—a course on which I think the American people are soundly determined."

F. R. Wilcox, director of the marketing agreements division of Agricultural Adjustment Administration, said in an address the farmers would have to do something themselves about getting a fair share of retail prices paid for their products.

Tribute Arranged To Swedenborg

Plans for a dinner in Washington to commemorate the 250th anniversary of the birth of Emanuel Swedenborg, Swedish philosopher, scientist and theologian, whose birthday January 29 will be honored throughout the world, were formed by a Washington committee last night. The Swedish Minister, Wolmar F. Bostrom, will be guest of honor.

Members of the committee are Walter I. Swanton, Daniel Neilson, Harmon Chamberlin, Miss Maud Sewall, Mrs. Emma King Turner, Mrs. Robert T. Small and Dr. Paul Sperry, at whose home the meeting was held.

"No single individual in the world's history ever encompassed in himself so great a variety of useful knowledge as Emanuel Swedenborg," Chairman Swanton said. "He wrote in all 257 works, many treating on mining, metallurgy, physiology, theology, mathematics and psychology, earning for him the title of 'the last of the universal scholars.' He stands a colossal figure which only can be measured by the long perspective of the ages."

Dr. Root Will Speak.

The second in a series of open forums of the social work students of Catholic University will be held at 7:30 p. m. today in St. Thomas Hall. Dr. Manly B. Root, physciatrist at the National Training School for Boys, will speak on "Practical Experience in Juvenile Delinquency," Frank Rooney, chairman of the committee in charge of the forum, announced.

Reynolds informed the Senate yesterday that news equivalent to "a dog bites a man" broke in Asheville, N. C., the other day, when a local industrialist indorsed the wages and hours bill. Asheville is Reynolds' home town.

Up rose Senator Lewis Schwellenbach, of Washington.

"Isn't Asheville known as the 'Gem of the Mountains?'" archly inquired Schwellenbach.

"I thank the Senator," said Reynolds. "It is known as 'the little gem of the mountains'—the most beautiful spot on the face of the earth with the exception of other beautiful spots in North Carolina."

He made the assertion at a committee hearing considering revision of the maritime act.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said the "feeling is spreading throughout the United States that it is not safe to travel on American ships because of lack of discipline aboard." Copeland read a letter from a passenger on an American ship who said all the passengers were subjected to "abuse, intimidation and disorder from the captain, mates and members of the crews."

The letter writer, whose name was not made a part of the record, said he referred to a Black Diamond Line ship. He did not name the vessel. SENATOR MINTON (Democrat), of Indiana, denied in the Senate the Federal Power Commission was "unnecessarily intruding itself" upon the State of North Carolina in requiring a Federal license for a proposed $6,000,000 hydro-electric project at Tuckertown, N. C.

Minton, in answer to assertions recently made on the floor by Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, declared commission jurisdiction was invoked by private interests and the Federal regulatory body proceeded under the power act of 1920.

MEMBERS OF CONGRESS from nine States discussed protests against proposed abandonment of the country's 36 Civilian Conservation Corps drainage camps.

Bar Grievance Group Names Two Lawyers

Two Bondsmen Also Cited to Appear in D. C. Police Court.

Two attorneys and two professional bondsmen late yesterday were ordered to appear in Police Court December 21 to show cause why they should not be suspended from further practice in the court.

They were cited before the court by Presiding Judge John P. McMahon after they were accused of unethical conduct by a special grievance committee of the District Bar Association.

Those named in the petition filed with Judge McMahon in open court yesterday were Attorneys John P. Mullen and Henry D. Green and Bondsmen Hyman Mendelson and Joseph P. McGee. All of the men accepted service of the order when they were approached by representatives from the United States marshal's office.

The charges culminate a six-month investigation by the grievance committee which was formed at the suggestion of Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran. Curran requested that the committee look into conditions at Police Court and recommend changes.

The committee was composed of Attorneys Austin F. Canfield, chairman, William E. Gallagher, George Monk and Franklyn Yosmer.

T. Edward O'Connell, fifth member of the grievance committee, resigned yesterday morning shortly before the petitions were presented to the court. He stated:

"I wish to compliment the members of the committee for their sincere effort to do a public service, but I feel that there are other ways which might better accomplish the purpose."

Canfield revealed at the monthly meeting of the Bar Association last night that his committee had been "taken over" by the judges and made, in effect, an agency of the police court. Members of the committee, he said, were warned by the judges against making public announcement of its work. He said the committee has received many complaints, a large majority of which came from "crackpots."

No complaints will be investigated by the committee, members of which have virtually given up their private practices, unless accompanied by affidavits, Canfield said.

Mullen and the two bondsmen were named by the committee as being involved in one case. They collaborated to deceive a client into paying a higher premium for a bond than was allowed under police court rules, the petition charges.

Green was accused of unprofessional conduct and openly soliciting in connection with two cases.

Much Dis(Cussed) Snow Parking Ban Becomes Effective

Washington's much dis(cussed) "snow parking" ban became effective at 2 a. m. today.

And until March 15 more than 50 city streets throughout the city will be barred to motorists who want to park between 2 and 8 a. m. Recently upheld by the United States Court of Appeals, the parking prohibition was installed to facilitate the removal of snow—if and when it snows.

But snow or no snow, the rule will stick for three months, and police have warned it will be strictly enforced.

Body of 6th Victim Of French Murder Syndicate Is Found

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 4.—Police today found the body of Janine Keller, sixth known victim of the murder-for profit syndicate, exposed by the confession of Eugene Weidmann, German ex-convict and confessed executioner for the murder ring.

Weidmann told police he used part of his loot to learn to tango and waltz. When he was arrested last week, he was just mastering the rhumba.

Auto Tags for 1938 Make Capital Bow

Last night, District motorists could legally drive with next year's plates—provided they had filed applications.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said the new tag sale was approximately 10,000 behind this time last year, and urged car owners to claim their tags immediately.

There will be no extension after midnight December 31, Van Duzer warned, and old tags will not be honored simply because someone "forgot" or neglected to obtain 1938 licenses.

Rep. Burch Names Two For West Point Exams

By the Associated Press.

Representative Burch (Democrat), of Virginia, named Samuel Stone Gregory, jr., of Pittsylvania County, Va., yesterday as first alternate, and Overton Caldwell Hubbard, jr., of Halifax County, as second alternate to take the March, 1938, examinations for admission to West Point.

Locked Doors Hide Man Cut to Death, His Clothes Intact

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—Mystery confronted police today with finding of a man's body in the locked third-floor office of a downtown loft building.

The man, dressed even to a buttoned topcoat, had been stabbed twice in the chest and four times in the throat, but there were no holes in his clothing. He was about 45. Near the body was a bookbinding chisel and a pair of shears, both bloodstained.

George and John Fisher, owners of a binding business in whose office the body was found, said no one in the building knew the man. They said the firm's doors were locked at 6 p. m. yesterday and not reopened, to their knowledge, until 8:30 a. m. today, when a woman employe found the body.

P. U. C. Rejects Fare Rehearing Plea of Citizens

Petition Filed Too Late, Holidays Included in Deadline, Says Seal.

The Public Utilities Commission was notified yesterday by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal that the petition of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, requesting a rehearing on the commission's ruling on street car fares, was filed too late and could not be granted.

Under a P. U. C. ruling, Seal said, such appeals must be filed within 30 days from the date of publication of the order. The commission's order raising street car fares was posted November 3. William McK. Clayton, representing the federation, filed his petition December 4.

Clayton maintained his petition had been filed on time, since Thanksgiving Day was within the 30-day period and should not be counted, because it was a legal holiday. Later he declared he had been notified of the commission's order November 5.

Both claims were disallowed by the corporation counsels office. Seal said a notice of the P. U. C. order was posted on the public bulletin board in the District Building, November 3, and that Sundays and holidays were not exempted under the 30-day period provided in the P. U. C. act.

Shoplifting Squad Nabs 16 in 2 Days

Twenty-six cases in two days is the record established by the District shoplifting squad.

Under the direction of Detective Lieut. Clement P. Cox, the squad, composed of 15 detectives and 2 policewomen, was placed in most downtown stores last Friday, to remain until Christmas Eve.

Sixteen persons, 11 of them women, have been caught stealing articles valued at almost $500, Cox said yesterday. Charges against them totaled 26. The prisoners range in ages from 14 to 66, with some held fo rseveral offenses.

Holding Firm Suit Reaches Supreme Court

Electric Bond and Share Challenges Ruling of New York Court.

By the Associated Press.

A suit challenging the Roosevelt Administration's attempt to regulate, split or abolish holding companies controlling billions of dollars of interstate gas and electric properties reached the Supreme Court yesterday.

The litigation arrived in the form of an appeal by the Electric Bond & Share Co., which called the 1935 utility holding company act unconstitutional.

The Department of Justice has agreed validity of the statute should be tested by this litigation. There were strong indications the Government would seek a prompt decision.

Joined by 26 subsidiaries, the top holding company in the Electric Bond & Share system sought a review of a decision by the second circuit court of appeals at New York. That decision required the company to register with the Secties and Exchange Commission and to submit reports of financial conditions and corporate structure. Registration is the first step required by the 1935 act.

Both the company and the Government sought unsuccessfully to obtain a review of a Federal district court decision in the case last spring, without waiting for a decision by the court of appeals.

Since then, Congress has passed legislation permitting a direct appeal from a Federal district court to the Supreme Court on litigation involving constitutional questions.

In the petition it filed today, the company pointed out that, pending a final decision, "no attempt has been made by the Government to force companies which did not voluntarily register under the act to comply with it."

Full Steam Ahead!

The Navy considers the Panay: Why, said the old tar when the talk was at its height, don't we just mysteriously move the fleet to the West Coast and begin fueling it, supplying it up as for a very long voyage . . . Don't say a word, just start fueling and putting on supplies as if we were going on a very long voyage . . . And then start off as if we were to move across the Pacific; wouldn't you begin to hear more sweet apologies out of Japan?

Another evidence that Greenbelters have settled down to the newer arts of living: C. R. Orchard, director, Federal Credit Union Section, FCA, announces that a charter for a Federal Credit Union was issued yesterday to Greenbelt people . . . Incorporators of the Greenbelt Union are George E. Hodson, jr., Mrs. Theodora Murray, Glendon L. Allred, William T. Donahue, Sherrard E. East, George F. Bauer, Oscar C. Lightner and Edward Thornhill . . . More than 150 applied for the charter.

A tip to collectors of Americana: Those objections that thousands of Americans raised to signing their names on Social Security blanks, and more lately, to committing themselves in regard to the Unemployed Census. Those objections, we heard, were in some instances, classic. One man almost wept, saying that if he signed anything he would be breaking a blood oath. It appears that his grandfather had once signed something, later to discover himself mulcted out of his farm. He had committed his son to the oath, never to sign anything, and the oath had gone down to the grandson.

Betty Reports.

The house organ of U. F. W. A., Local No. 2, reports as follows: "Betty Finklestein, of the Solicitor's Office, at the Thursday night performance of 'Richard II' reports that John L. Lewis was also an interested spectator" . . . And while we congratulate Betty on letting us know the forms of entertainment John L. likes, we feel there isn't any news in what she has said . . . It will be news when she can report seeing John L. and Bill Green at a performance together, say, some such performance as "All's Well That Ends Well," but such a hope right now seems little more than a midsummer night's dream . . .

FEDERAL FIDDLINGS: A. N. F. E. Local recently offered a 12-pound turkey as a prize by way of inducing members to attend a meeting . . . The bird was won by Mrs. Sue Inge, Loans and Currency, Treasury. Awards for exceptional service in the form of billfolds went to A. D. Sartwell, Internal Revenue; Mrs. Sue Inge and W. E. Perry, office of the chief clerk, Treasury . . . The F. A. E. C. T., a very spirited group, announces "a complete victory," says the Portsmouth Navy Yard technicians are now working five hours less per week" as a result of the successful fight carried on by the Federation. "The successful action of the Federation in staving off this increase in hours is of particular importance since there was every indication in the speeches of Navy Secretary Swanson that an increase in hours would be extended to the other Navy yards, as the Navy building program was behind schedule . . . The N. F. F. E. takes in five new locals as result of a coordinated membership drive that was bugled up at the Springfield Convention. There are: Local 622, Zion National Park, Utah, National park employes; 623 Baltimore, International Revenue Agent's Office; 624 Boston, Mass., collector's (Internal Revenue) office; 625 Alexandria, Veterans' Administration, and 626 Washington, Library of Congress . . . Glenn K. Rule, of the Soil Conservation Service, Agriculture, has written—in popular style—a new farmer's bulletin titled "Conserving Corn Belt Soil" . . . There were 964 separate personnel actions in Agriculture, some of the items being: Dismissal as result of formal charges, 18; appointment terminated with prejudice, 91; suspension without pay and reprimand by Secretary 39; resignation accepted with prejudice, 57; reduction in grade and/or salary, reprimand by Secretary and transfer, 1; reprimand by chief of bureau, 21, and so on, with the figures not of startling size. Not startling at all when you consider that there were 60,229 employes serving under formal appointment on June 30, 1937. And if you are interested in comparisons, the number on June, 1936, was 53,522 . . . A postal card from Roy Sheridan, of the Third Assistant Postmaster General's office, indicates that the first-day sale of a special stamp at Charlotte Amalie exceeded his expectations.

I. C. C. Hearing On Freight Rate Boosts Closed

Obections to Increase Will Be Heard Regionally Next Year.

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission completed yesterday its first hearing on application by the Nation's railroads for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates. Observers predicted a decision by March 1.

The next hearing will begin here December 23, on the application of Eastern lines for a one-half-cent-a-mile increase in passenger fares.

R. C. Fulbright, of Washington, chairman of a shippers committee, said major objections to the freight advance would be made at regional hearings later.

Senate investigators asserted yesterday Kuhn, Loeb & Co. profited in 1935 by having "inside information" on the intention of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad to petition for reorganization under the Federal bankruptcy law.

The New York banking firm, they contended, sold its preferred stock holdings at about the same time directors of the St. Paul decided to file a bankruptcy petition, although knowledge of the decision was not given to the public until later.

Robert T. Swaine, New York bank and railroad lawyer, and Fairman R. Dick, investment banker, expressed doubt that Kuhn, Loeb & Co. knew in advance of the road's intentions. Swaine and Dick are St. Paul directors.

Miss Mayte Boylan Is Admitted to Bar Of Supreme Court

Upon motion of a fellow woman lawyer, Miss Mayte E. Boylan, who has been the only woman attorney in the mining division of the RFC, was admitted yesterday to the bar of the United State Supreme Court.

Miss Beatrice A. Clephane, director of the legal aid bureau and former grand dean of Kappa Beta Pi, international legal sorority, moved her admission.

Miss Boylan, who lives at 3220 Connecticut avenue, is a member of the bar of the New York Court of Appeals. She received her A.B. degree from Goucher College in 1930 and her law degree from Columbia University in 1933.

Hofmann Derides 'Temperamental' Fellow Musicians

"Unnecessary" is the term Josef Hofmann applies to the antics of his temperamental fellow musicians.

The world-famed pianist, who will appear tonight with the National Symphony Orchestra at Constitution Hall, has been playing for 50 years and never has walked off the stage in a huff.

"It really shouldn't be done," he said yesterday at the Mayflower. He was referring particularly to Sergei Koussevitzky's recent action in cutting short a concert because of late arrivals.

Hofmann concedes, however, that American audiences have a lot to learn when it comes to arriving at concerts on time. He suggests that music-lovers might wake up 15 minutes earlier the day of a concert, thus leaving themselves more leeway.

This year Hofmann celebrates the golden jubilee of his first performance in the United States. The first of music's "child prodigies," he made his American debut at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York at the age of 10.

One of his favorite compositions is one he has never played. It is Chopin's third concerto, which the composer dedicated to him.

"But Chopin played it so magnificently I've never dared try it myself," Hofmann says.

Spire to Dominate Squat Pavilions of New Navy Hospital

Design of the new naval hospital will be a combination of vertical and horizontal lines, President Roosevelt said yesterday.

At a conference with Rear Admiral Perceval S. Rossiter, navy surgeon general, agreement was reached on general plans for a tall central building to house operating rooms, kitchens and members of the staff, the President explained, adding that patients would be housed in low outlying pavilions.

A hospital along those lines could be expanded to four or five times normal size to meet possible wartime needs, Mr. Roosevelt said.

Asserting no site had yet been chosen for the proposed medical center, he declared that an architectural competition would be held to get the best possible plans.

Mrs. Roosevelt to Aid Needy at Christmas

The local Volunteers of America will be assisted in distributing Christmas cheer to needy by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, it was announced last night by Lieut. Maj. H. Mills Eroh, regional commander.

Mrs. Roosevelt has accepted an invitation to attend the Christmas party which will be held at 1:30 p. m., December 24, at the Thomson School. Hundreds of baskets of food will be distributed to needy families. Arrangements are also being made to have scores of children fitted with shoes.

U. S. Jury to Act In Fake Bill Case

Baltimore, Dec. 14 (AP).—Jad Merhige, of Ne wYork, was held for action of the Federal grand jury today on a charge of passing counterfeit $10 and $25 bills in Hagerstown.

United States Commissioner James F. Cullen held him in bond of $4,000 after Merhige admitted the charge. Pennsylvania State police testified they found counterfeits in Merhige's car when they arrested him near Chambersburg.

D.C. Police Posters Warn Pedestrians Of Traffic Danger

Warning motorists and pedestrians against traffic dangers, 300 placards were distributed by police yesterday. Merchants were asked to display them in show windows.

Demanding "this needless traffic slaughter be stopped," the posters cite traffic death figures for the past year and focus attention on the hazards of walking against signal lights and crossing streets in the middle of the block.

Senate Defeats $500,000,000 Granary Limit

By Robert C. Albright.

By a vote of 49 to 23, the Senate last night refused to place a $500,000,000 limitation on the Administration's new ever normal granary program carrying so-called "sky limit" parity price guarantees to farmers.

The half-billion "top" for the program, proposed by a Republican, and supported by stalwart Democratic members of the Senate Appropriations Committee, was overridden despite warnings of a White House veto if that sum is exceeded without taxes.

Leaders held Senators in session past dinner-time for a vote on the amendment tossed into the farm bill melee by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan.

Barkley Threatens.

Then Majority Leader Barkley served notice he will order night sessions, beginning tonight, unless the crop control measure, which has been before the Senate for more than three weeks, is passed today.

Vandenberg charged sums necessary to finance the program remain "a total and complete mystery and I respectfully submit that Senators cannot appropriate public money to a mystery." He said the President had "bluntly indicated" he would veto any farm measure calling for more than $500,000,000 a year unless taxes were enacted for the additional amount.

Neither the House nor the Senate farm bill provides processing taxes, or any other means of revenue except penalty taxes for exceeding marketing quotas.

Adams Pleads in Vain.

Vainly, Senator Alva B. Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the appropriations deficiency sub-committee, swung to support of the limitation, and appealed to the leadership "not to take the bridle" off the Appropriations Committee.

"Let us err on the side of being a little careful with appropriations, and not leave the sums necessary for this program limitless," said Adams.

"We ought to assure the taxpayers what they will have to pay under this measure, and that the financial situation is such that if we begin with a wide-open appropriation, without any limits, we are not doing our duty."

As other Democratic members of the Appropriations Committee joined Adams in asking some limitation on spending, Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, charged the committee had "tacked tail and run," and was "avoiding its responsibility."

Adams contended the Appropriations Committee might have to approve more than $1,000,000,000 to finance proposed parity prices for farmers, under conflicting provisions of the measure, and declared it would be accused of "bad faith" if it failed to.

The measure declares it the "policy" of Congress to make parity price payments to farmers. Connally replied that this policy is modified by a subsequent provision that only those funds available would be distributed "pro rata" among farmers toward parity.

Majority Leader Barkley opposed the limitation, contending "other Congresses will be just as meticulous as we are in the matter of appropriations."

Earlier, Barkley, who has vainly sought to terminate debate and send the bill to conference committee for final revisions, made his first floor threat of night sessions.

Dislikes Threats.

"It is important that this be passed at the earliest possible date," the leader told the Senate. "If we recess on December 22, that means we have only eight days left. I dislike threatening to resort to night sessions, although we may have to hold one tomorrow night."

The Senate yesterday had reached tthe ninety-seventh and last page in the complicated bil, then returned to consider controversial provisions previously passed over, including the indefinite appropriation proviso.

Another attempt either to limit the farm outlay, or to modify the assurance of parity prices, may be made today. Several Democratic Senators, including Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, and Chairman Ellison D. Smith, of the Agriculture Committee, were in favor of some degree of modification, but were unwilling to accept the Vandenberg $500,000,000 figure.

Southerners Claim 204 Votes To Recommit Wage Measure

Whips Count 135 Democrats to Act With 69 Republicans; Decision to Be So Close Absentees May Hold Bill's Fate.

this bill was a baby that had been dumped on her doorstep. Now she asks the House to father it.

"We're trying to find out who its daddy is.

"We're forced to the conclusion that this child was born out of wedlock with its parents disclaiming it. In its nursery it has suffered from a mishandling of diapers and of safety pins, until it has a skin rash from being changed so often. It has changed so much its own parents wouldn't recognize it."

McReynolds, who complained grievously at the 20-minute time allowance granted his group out of the six hours, with the remainder allotted entirely to the Democratic majority favoring the bill and to the Republican minority, shouted, waving his fists above his head:

"Who knows the President is for this bill? I'll bet he's never read it. It's changed all around since he sent his message up."

He referred to the remark of President Roosevelt at a recent press conference that he is keeping hands off the wage-hour fight, and hinted he had not read the bill.

Printers Are Confused.

The comedy of errors surrounding the bill's entire history added another chapter yesterday when the usually blameless Government Printing Office somehow became so confused in tracking down the central substance of the bill, through four kinds of type in the present print, that three sections of the measure were confused or omitted from a supposed "clean print" that it was preparing for the use of the House yesterday. The copies were called back hastily and returned to the G. P. O. for correction. Speaker Bankhead said:

"The printing office confesses its error—expresses regret, just like the Japanese—but nevertheless the bill is sunk for today."

Discussing the parliamentary situation, Representative Robert L. Ramspeck, of Georgia, ranking Democrat on the Labor Committee, said Mrs. Norton will offer at once the "clean print" of the latest committee draft as an amendment to the first section of the present bill, with notice its sections will be substituted, section by section, for those in the pending bill. At once other substitutes will be in order and Representative John Dockweiler (Democrat), California, will offer the American Federation of Labor's bill. Then amendments to the substitutes will be in order.

Ramspeck, in debate, warned against a proposed provision to set up committees for each industry, responsible to a Labor Department administrator. He cited the Supreme Court's NRA decision on delegation of power and expressed preference for a Labor Standards Board. He reminded members the court had often upheld quasi-judicial functions of such boards while objecting to delegations of power to citizens' committees.

Representative Lawrence Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, asked that the name of his brother, the late William P. Connery, be deleted from title of the measure, as "the bill is not in accord with my brother's principles."

Representative Arthur Lamneck (Democrat), Ohio, asserted the bill "is the last desperate effort of the brain-trusters to put control of wages under the Government," and Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, declared reformation of business should await end of the recession.

Hall to Oppose McAdoo.

Los Angeles, Dec. 14 (AP).—Pelrson M. Hall, former United States district attorney for Southern California, today announced he would be a candidate for Democratic nomination as United States Senator next year to succeed William Gibbs McAdoo.

Congress Gets Fire Report on U. S. Buildings

Council Offers Suggestions to Eliminate Hazards to Workers.

Two congressional committees will examine the report of the Federal Fire Council to determine whether legislation is needed to protect Federal workers in Washington against fire hazards, it was indicated yesterday after President Roosevelt had sent the report to Capitol Hill.

The Federal Fire Council stated that "immediate attention" should be given 66 buildings, housing 6,500 employes, as the exits are "poor."

In some of the newer Federal buildings, the report stated, the storage of papers has created a fire hazard. The council recommended that incombustible shelving and files or automatic alarms or extinguishers be installed.

"Conditions in rented building were indicated to be somewhat less favorable than Government-owned buildings," the council stated.

The report, which was transmitted by the President without comment, was referred to committees.

Sixty-two thousand Government workers are housed in buildings with uninclosed stairways, but having only minor hazards.

Eighty-six per cent of the Government-owned property is of fire-resistive construction, while 13 per cent is of wood interior or wood framing.

Two hundred and seventy Federal-owned buildings and 38 rented ones were said to have good exits, while 419 Government buildings and 28 rented buildings have fair exits.

The council recommended that the District Fire Department be equipped with carbon dioxide to be used, especially in fire resistive buildings, to reduce damage from water.

Lyman J. Briggs, chairman of the council, signed the report.

Death of Scholar Blamed on Narrow Road in Maryland

A narrow 15-foot highway in nearby Maryland was blamed in testimony before a coroner's hearing last night for the auto death December 6, of Dr. Romanus Francois Butin, 66, internationally known scholar and professor for many years at Catholic University.

The driver of the car in which Dr. Butin was riding, Father Charles A. Dubray of the Marist College at Catholic University, told Acting Coroner John J. Fainter at Hyattsville:

"I said to Dr. Butin as we were turning off the boulevard (Washington-Baltimore boulevard) into University Drive, this is a narrow road and we'll have to be careful."

Dr. Fainter's verdict was "unavoidable death."

New Health Department Policy Relieves Gallinger of Crowding.

An increase in maternity service in the homes, brought about in part at least by the new policy of the Health Department of encouraging deliveries in homes for normal maternity patients who formerly would have gone to overcrowded Gallinger Hospital, was reported to the December meeting of the board of directors of the Instructive Visiting Nurses Society yesterday.

Miss Gertrude H. Bowling, executive secretary, also reported the usual seasonal occurrences of respiratory diseases.

The secretary, Mrs. John M. Sternhagen, also announced the presentation of $100 to the endowment fund from Mrs. Dwight Clark, former director, as a Christmas memorial in honor of her late husband, Dwight Clark.

Miss Bowling also reported on the proposed WPA housekeeping-aid project, declaring this would be of assistance in indigent homes where the woman in the house is ill.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, president of the society, presided at the meeting, which was attended also by:

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

A finesse is an attempt to win a trick. But, at the same time, it is also an attempt to gain an entry. There are many times when the entry is just as important as the winning of the trick which creates the entry. An illustration of this principle is found in the hand below.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 N T	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

The slam contract arrived at by North and South was perhaps a trifle optimistic, since it was necessary for them to avoid the loss of both a trump trick and a heart trick. A slightly different distribution, however, might have made the hand a laydown. If North had started with a doubleton heart, South would have needed only a favorable trump break to make his contract.

West opened the eight of clubs, East winning with the Ace. Hoping for a ruff, East continued with the Jack of clubs. South won with the King, and noted with satisfaction that dummy's ten of clubs was established and would afford a heart discard. South next laid down the Ace of spades, and discovered, to his dismay, that East had started with all the outstanding trumps.

A little calculation disclosed that it would be necessary to enter dummy twice for spade finesses and a third time for the discard on the ten of clubs. It was too risky to attempt to cash the ten of clubs earlier, since East's play indicated that he had started with a doubleton club.

The only way in which re-entry could be obtained to the dummy was by means of the diamond suit. Although South had three natural diamond tricks, it was necessary for him to risk the loss of a diamond in order to find the vital third entry to dummy.

Declarer, therefore, took his courage in both hands and finessed dummy's ten of diamonds. When this held, the contract was safe.

Pittsburgh Woman Wins $100 in Ed Reed's Contest; Two From District Included in Group Winning Minor Prizes.

Bib, Ann and Tucker will be the names of the three babies in Ed Reed's "Off the Record" cartoons appearing daily in The Washington Post as the result of a Nation-wide baby-naming contest.

Winner of the $100 first prize for this title is Marie M. Debold, of Pittsburgh, Pa. Second prize of $75 went to Mrs. Virginia L. Bushmeyer, Louisville, Ky., and third prize went to Mrs. J. E. Ambler, Dumblane, Saskatoon, Canada.

"The Three Bares" is the suggestion for title of the Sunday strip sent in by John C. Hydell, of Hoboken, N. J. Although this was not embraced in the contest, Ed Reed was so fascinated by the title he sent a $25 check.

Among Washington Post readers, Miss Frances Woltz, 3738 Chesapeake street northwest, won one of the 50 $2 awards, and Miss Allie M. Herren, 4112 Qualt place northeast, and Miss Miriam E. Huddle, 104 Northbrook lane, Bethesda, each won one of the 50 $1 awards.

Tens of thousands of readers throughout this country, Canada, and in some foreign countries took part in the christening by sending in names. With the aid of a score of clerks and bookkeepers that set of names was selected which was believed to be easiest to remember, the cleverest and most adaptable for future antics of the two little boys and the girl.

The babies were thought up by Reed several months ago when he became a voluntary patient in a hospital with a room close to the maternity ward.

Shingles to Delay Cardoza's Return To Supreme Bench

By the Associated Press.

A complication has arisen in the condition of Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo which, according to Dr. John Paul Earnest, jr., may delay his return to the Supreme Court. Cardozo has been ill with the grip.

"I am very well satisfied with the general condition of the justice," Dr. Earnest said yesterday, "but an unfortunate complication has developed. Shingles have appeared which are painful, but not infrequent in such cases. It will take a little time for them to disappear. Their appearance does not mean anything so far as the justice's general condition is concerned. They will merely delay his return to the bench."

Society to Stage Play.

The Girls' Friendly Society of the diocese of Washington will give a benefit performance of "Noah" by Washington Civic Theater Group at the Wardman Park Theater Tuesday. Tickets may be purchased at the Church of the Epiphany Parish House, 1317 G street northwest., District 2635.

Girdler Urges Change in Labor Act to Aid Trade

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—Tom M. Girdler, chairman of the Republic Steel Corporation, called for revision of the Wagner act tonight as the first step toward curbing the business recession.

The uncompromising foe of the C. I. O. professed to see the economic basis for a "great period of prosperity" and the "employment of millions" in the Nation, but contended national policies must be changed to eliminate uncertainty. He told the Illinois Manufacturers Association in a prepared address:

"The first step which should be taken to curb the current recession and get more men back to work again is to revise the Wagner act so that both parties to collective bargaining—employers as well as employes—will get a square deal."

Labor legislation, he added, should embody these principles:

"1. Employes should have the free right to bargain collectively with their employers through representatives of their own choosing without coercion from any source.

"2. No employe should be forced to pay dues to a union.

"3. All employes should be permitted to take a vote by secret ballot on whether or not they want to strike.

"4. Responsibility of a union in any contract or agreement should be equal to the responsibility assumed by the employer."

Girdler also advocated as steps toward better times a real effort to balance the national budget, revision of the capital gains and undistributed profits taxes, revamping of the social security plan and termination of "experiments in Government control."

British Ponder Naval Increase In Chinese Seas

Expressions of Regret for Latest Incidents Sent by Japanese.

By the United Press.

London, Dec. 14.—British cabinet leaders, summoned to an emergency session with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, today discussed the advisability of dispatching additional warships to Chinese waters to cope with further attacks on British men-o'-war.

The government's ministers ruled out talk of a possible joint naval demonstration by British and American warships.

There seemed scant possibility that any of Britain's big battleships, such as the Hood, Rodney and Repulse, would be sent to the Far East—as demanded by some members of Parliament. The government is wary of weakening its naval strength in the Mediterranean and around Spain.

If British strength in Chinese waters is reinforced it probably will be by means of destroyers and cruisers.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, acting under instructions from the cabinet, appeared in the House of Commons this afternoon and announced that he hoped to make a "full statement" tomorrow.

There was nothing to indicate Britain's protest against the attacks on British ships in the Yangtze, now being prepared, would be sent to Emperor Hirohito.

The British note was being completed tonight for immediate delivery, probably tomorrow morning after a meeting of the entire cabinet.

Apologies Offered.

By the Associated Press.

Three expressions of regret for the latest incidents in China have been received by British officials.

Japanese Ambassador Shigeru Yoshida today apologized to Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden. In Tokyo, Japan handed Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, British Ambassador, a note expressing regret. Previously a military attache here had expressed regrets to the British war office.

Elders Assume Helm in New Puppet Regime

Provisional Government Is Proclaimed With Support of Japan.

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, China, Dec. 14.—A provisional government, composed of elderly Chinese statesmen and formed with the co-operation of the Japanese, was proclaimed here today for the Chinese republic.

It was inaugurated at ceremonies in the former presidential palace over which floated the old five-barred flag of National China.

The proclamation said the mission of the provisional government was to restore a democratic regime and to purge the country of the Kuomintang (National People's Party) "dictatorship," which it blamed for the current Japanese-Chinese hostilities.

It promised to observe all of China's foreign obligations. It also declared the older men would step out in favor of younger officials after the country and its political affairs had been put in order.

3 Ministries Filled.

Three ministries were filled today, and it was announced a President would be chosen later.

Tang Gen-ho, 60-year-old native of Chekiang, Japanese University graduate, one-time head of the National Medical College here and former finance minister in the Anfu government, was chosen political minister.

Wang Keh-min, one-eyed former minister of finance in the Anfu government, was named administrative minister, and Tung Kang made minister of justice.

Tang Gen-ho explained the provisional government was formed on a revolutionary basis due to "situations and exigencies."

Still Open Door.

He said it sought the co-operation of the whole world except the Communists; that it would not close China's "Open Door" and that it considered itself the government for the whole of China where the Kuomintang forces had been pushed back.

He added that the government had de facto Japanese recognition.

Attending the inaugural ceremonies were Gen. Seiichi Kita, Japanese military attache in China and generally regarded as the father of the new government, and Counselor Goro Morishima, of the Japanese embassy.

During the morning, Japanese planes dropped leaflets on this city announcing the fall of Nanking and urging Chinese to support the new regime.

Man Slays Wife, Wires Mother to Get His Children

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—John Oliver Thompson, 30, an elevator operator, sent a telegram to his mother, in Norfolk, Va., today saying, "something terrible has happened. Please come to New York and get the two children."

Soon afterward, the body of Thompson's estranged wife, Mrs. Delia Thompson, 24, was found in their apartment. A towel was knotted about her throat, and she had been stabbed several times in the back.

Police said Thompson asserted he killed the woman when she returned to the apartment "acting like a tigress," and demanded custody of the children and $15 weekly.

Stock Controlling System Described

A system by which every garment in a huge department store is numbered and tagged was described last night to the National Capital Group of Controllers, affiliated with the National Retail Dry Goods Association, at a meeting in the Lafayette Hotel.

The system was that of the F. R. Jelleff Co., and the speaker was Carl Knapp, controller of Jelleff's. The paper he presented was "Inventory Control and Tabulation."

With the use of tabulating equipment and the numbering system the firm has complete check on every article of dress goods in the store, Knapp pointed out. When a garment is sold the number is canceled. This system reduces possibility of a shortage in stock, keeps officials better informed and aids in intelligent buying, Knapp said.

Presiding at last night's meeting was controller at S. Kann Sons, J. Frank Brown, chairman of the group.

and the three Standard Oil craft—and American flags were painted on the superstructures of the vessels.

Attacked In Daylight.

American officials to whom we talked had believed it impossible that the attacking fliers had failed to see either the flags or the colors, since the attack came in broad daylight.

So far as this correspondent could learn, everybody aboard the Panay suffered considerably. Many suffered direct injuries; others from shock, exposure and strain.

It seemed a miracle to us that anybody escaped, in view of the nature of the attack.

Also, our subsequent experiences were almost as terrifying as those aboard the gunboat just before she went down.

Injuries Described.

We are leaving immediately for Shanghai on the American gunboat Oahu. Other survivors, we learned, were rescued when they reached Hohsien, and were received by Rear Admiral Holt, of the British naval forces in the Yangtze River, then taken aboard the British and American gunboats. These injuries we can report from our own knowledge:

The Panay's commander, Lieut. Comdr. J. J. Hughes, of Washington, suffered a broken leg.

Emile Gassie, clerk of the United States Embassy in Nanking, suffered a broken leg.

Alex Kozak, machinist's mate, second class, of Ansonia, Conn., suffered serious chest wounds.

Wounded In Back.

Charles S. Schroyer, seaman, first class, of Baxter, Iowa, was injured in the head and leg.

P. D. Zeigler, ship cook, third class, of Delaware, Ohio, was injured in the head and body.

K. J. Rice, electrician's mate, third class, of Mishowaka, Ind., was injured in the back.

Electrician Kirk (possibly Carl Henry Burke, electrician's mate, first class, of Milaca, Minn.) was injured on the hands and back.

J. H. Lang, chief quartermaster, of Long Beach, Calif., was injured on the arm and chin.

R. R. Hebard, fireman first class, of Friendship, Wis., was injured in the hip.

"The ship was abandoned at 2:05 and sank at 3:54.

"Before the Panay sank it was attacked by two Japanese motor launches, which machine-gunned it.

"Then Japanese forces from the launches boarded the Panay and made an examination just before it sank.

"The Panay's colors were showing throughout the bombing and machine-gunning, and it sank with flags flying," the Bee dispatches said.

U. S. Skipper Killed.

Capt. C. H. Carlson, American skipper of the Standard oil vessel Meian, was killed on the ship's bridge during the attack on the American river craft.

In Shanghai, Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander of the United States fleet in Chinese waters, rejected an indirect Japanese suggestion that American gunboats be withdrawn from the area of hostilities on the Yangtze.

Japanese Admiral Killed.

(Chinese in Hongkong reported the death of Japanese Admiral Osami Nagano, commander of the combined Japanese fleet, from injuries received when 15 Chinese bombers sank the 32,720-ton battleship Nagato near Kiangyin November 24.)

Germany added her protests to those of Great Britain against the bombing of the British steamer Wangpu, on the grounds temporary German embassy offices had been established on the ship.

Alarm grew for the safety of 18 Americans in conquered Nanking as hours of silence passed after Japanese occupation of China's capital.

Radio dispatches from foreign rescue ships said fighting near Hohsien endangered both the stranded survivors and the searchers.

Admiral Yarnell's flagship—the United States cruiser Augusta, at Shanghai—received word that a Japanese plane had left Hohsien yesterday but did not bring back any wounded.

The Japanese warship Hodzu was to convoy the other two ships to Shanghai with two Japanese minesweepers leading.

Besides the Hodzu, other Japanese warships at the scene were the Ataka and Kasasagi. The Japanese have assured safe passage to Shanghai for wounded ando ther survivors aboard the warships.

Missionary Shot.

Taiyuanfu, Dec. 14 (U.P.).—The British Baptist Hospital today informed the American Embassy that Garland Leonard, Yale (Iowa), missionary, was shot by Chinese soldiers October 7 at Yuanping, in North Shansi. Mrs. Leonard was at Taiyuanfu.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday) Dec. 15.—Dispatches from the British gunboat Bee today reported two Japanese motor launches machine-gunned the United States gunboat Panay before the American vessel sank Sunday after a Nipponese bomb attack.

Later, American and British gunboats heading down the Yangtze radioed that all foreigners involved in the bombing were safe aboard except four dead. Fourteen were wounded.

[The Exchange Telegraph Agency in London reported from Shanghai that the British gunboat Bee was fired upon, apparently by Chinese batteries, while carrying out rescue operations following the bombing of the Panay near Hohsien, according to the United Press.—Editor's note.]

The British vessel, anchored off Hohsien, where Panay survivors await rescue, relayed an account of the Panay's sinking to the U. S. S. Augusta, American flagship.

The Bee's report, quoting unidentified eye-witnesses, said:

"Japanese planes bombed the Panay at 1:50 p. m. Sunday (12:50 a. m. E. S. T.) from a great height, band had disappeared. She said they were Americans, had arrived in Russia November 6, and that they lived at the National Hotel in Moscow, adjacent to the American Embassy.

Then the woman disappeared. American Embassy officials in Moscow said they had no record of the couple, which was strange, because Americans usually take the precaution of registering at the embassy. Stories were published in this country telling of the strange disappearance of "Mr. and Mrs. Donald Louis Robinson," but no relatives appeared to demand a search for them.

Inquiries to the Soviet Foreign Office brought the response that the Russians had no information regarding the couple—did not even have a record of a visa being issued them. How they got into Russia without a visa remains unexplained, since even well-known persons experience difficulty in getting visas to enter Russia.

Robinsons Called Myth.

On Saturday, Secretary Hull sent for Ambassador Troyanovsky and insisted that an effort be made to find the couple. What the Soviet Ambassador said has not been revealed, but on Monday there were rumors that the Robinsons were mythical characters.

State Department agents, meanwhile, began to check information given by the "Robinsons," and found that the couple filed passport applications with the clerk of the court for New York County, accompanied by copies of birth certificates.

The man's birth certificate bore the name "Donald Louis Robinson," born in New York City March 25, 1905, and that of the woman, "Ruth Norma Birkland," born in Brooklyn, N. Y., December 28, 1909.

The agents found the certificates were genuine, but that both persons named in the certificates had died as children.

Their Actions Recalled.

In applying for the passports the couple asked that they be mailed to them in care of "M. Deutsch, 12 West Forty-second street, New York." State Department records show that a telegram to the "Robinsons" at that address was undelivered, and that a day or two later the department was requested to send the passports to them in care of "Drama League Travel Agency, New York."

Dispatches from New York stated that the Drama League Travel Agency had no record of the couple. "M. Deutsch" turned out to be Martin Deutch, a sculptor who once lived at the Forty-second street address. He now is in Hollywood. When questioned, he said he had no knowledge of the "Robinsons" and that he was in Florida in April, 1936, when the passports were issued.

Penalties Are Heavy

Three Federal statutes impose penalties for presenting false information to obtain a passport. One makes it punishable by fines up to $10,000 and imprisonment for not more than two years for fraud, another provides a fine not to exceed $2,000 and imprisonment for not more than five years for committing perjury, and the third provides a maximum sentence of $2,000 and five years' imprisonment for making a false statement.

In speculation that the couple might have been engaged in espionage, it was recalled that in 1933 two young Americans—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon Switz, were arrested in Paris with 16 others and charged with being members of an international spy ring. Subsequently, they gave evidence against their accomplices, and in May, 1935, were acquitted. During the trial there were reports that the group had worked for the Soviet government.

Manx Congress Passes Liberal Divorce Bill

Douglas, Isle of Man, Dec. 14 (AP).—A bill liberalizing divorce passed the House of Keys (Manx Parliament) today despite cries it would "give victory to the Hollywood spirit."

The bill followed lines of the measure successfully sponsored by A. P. Herbert, a writer, in the British commons, which added cruelty, desertion and incurable insanity to adultery as grounds for divorce.

30,000 'Sit' in Stores To Force 5-Day Week

Paris, Dec. 14 (U.P.).—More than 30,000 employes of all the large department stores in Paris won a victory over their employers tonight after a surprise sit-down strike that lasted three hours and threatened to paralyze Christmas shopping.

The workers went on strike at closing time and refused to leave until assured continuation of their five-day week. Shortly before 11 p. m. it was announced employers had agreed that existing contracts will remain in effect until next September.

Nippon Offers U. S. Indemnity For Bombings

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Dec. 14.—Japan today offered apologies and compensation for her attack on the United States gunboat Panay and three steamers, and safeguards for foreigners even before she formally received President Roosevelt's demands.

Japanese citizens, including waitresses and taxi drivers, at the same time halted Americans in the streets of Tokyo or called at American business offices to express their personal sorrow at Sunday's warplane bombing of the vessels near Nanking.

Apologies Presented.

Foreign Minister Koki Hirota sent a note to United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew in which Japan:

1. Presented her "sincere apologies" for the attack.
2. Promised to make "indemnifications for all losses and deal appropriately with those responsible for the incident."
3. Announced "strict orders" had been issued "to the authorities on the spot with a view to preventing recurrence of a similar incident."

Hirota presented a similar note to Sir Robert Craigie, British Ambassador to Japan, concerning the Sunday bombing of the British gunboats Bee and Ladybird.

It promised Japan would pay Great Britain "any necessary" indemnity.

The imperial headquarters, highest Japanese military and naval organ, issued a lengthy statement on Sunday's incident in which it charged three gunboats among the vessels attacked on the Yangtze fired on the Japanese warplanes when the Panay was sunk.

It declared the Japanese fliers stated that the steamers "carried no flags," but that "many soldiers, apparently Chinese, were sighted aboard them."

The note met the major demands of President Roosevelt even as Ambassador Grew arranged to see Hirota to present a note from the United States over the bombing incident.

Emperor Hirohito already had received the essence of the American Executive's point of view as given in a memorandum in Washington Monday, a government official said.

Denies Marks Were Visible.

The Japanese note declared Japanese warplanes bombed the American vessels in the Yangtze River Sunday after it had been reported Chinese troops were fleeing up the river by steamers from Nanking.

It asserted the aviators "were unable to discern any mark showing any of them was an American ship or man o' war."

Prince Fumimaro Konoye, premier, issued a statement in connection with the fall of Nanking in which he declared "the birth of a new China will serve to safeguard foreign interests in the Far East."

He pledged Japan's co-operation "with whatever administration comes into existence in China," and declared the fall of the evacuated capital marked "the beginning of real, protracted hostilities against China."

The formal occupation of Nanking was celebrated by an estimated 1,000,000 persons—mostly school children—in a parade through Tokyo.

Station to Be Dropped.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 14 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission has granted the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad permission to abandon its station at Meacham's River, in Albemarle County.

2 Known U. S. Victims of Japanese

Associated Press WIREPHOTOs.

Charles L. Ensminger (right), storekeeper aboard the U. S. gunboat Panay, and Capt. Carl Carlson, skipper of the Standard Oil tanker Meian, are the known American victims of the Japanese bombing of the Panay and three oil tankers. The bodies of a Chinese sailor and an Italian newspaperman also have been recovered. Eight passengers and six crew members of the Panay still are missing.

Approval Apparently Only Awaits White House Announcement.

tends to do "nothing spectacular" in reclamation work. It will follow its program, he said, and go ahead on work where "one job will lead to another."

Because of limited funds, the authority has as yet been unable to attack the larger squares where living conditions are congested, Ihlder said. He intimated that the larger projects might be undertaken when funds become available.

Sources close to Nathan Straus, head of the United States House Authority, said that Straus indicated he had been expecting the allocation to the District to be made in the near future but was not aware that it had already been approved.

Under section 28 of the housing act the President may allocate funds directly to the Alley Dwelling Authority of the District the only such organization set up as a Federal agency.

In her speech Monday night before the Washington Housing Association, of which she is honorary president, Mrs. Roosevelt declared that because Washington is visited by countless tourists annually, what is demonstrated here "can have a tremendous influence all over the country."

Photographs of homes within ten blocks of the White House showed living conditions to be "terrible", she said. "I hope that many years from now, when I return to Washington as a visitor, I will be shown different things," Mrs. Roosevelt declared.

New Orleans, Dec. 14 (AP).—Physicians reported today Frank Chabina, 19, had seen light through the left eye donated to him by John Amos, 67-year-old hospital companion.

Dr. George Haik said it was a good indication the operation, by which a portion of the cornea of Amos' eye was transferred to Chabina's eye, would be a success.

During the World War, Col. Dillingham was on duty here with the Sixty-third Infantry, which was stationed in Potomac Park.

U.S. Unsatisfied By 3 Japanese Apology Moves

Government Requires Assurances Attacks Will Not Recur.

"sincere apologies" and asserted that "the Japanese Government will make indemnifications for all the losses." Anticipating a demand which this Government did not make, he asserted that his government "will deal appropriately with those responsible for the incident."

Hirota also asserted that his government already had "issued strict orders to the authorities on the spot with a view to preventing the recurrence of a similar incident." This was interpreted as an assurance against the sinking of any more American ships.

But the United States in its formal note of protest went beyond the Panay incident. It demanded respect for rights of American citizens throughout China and assurances against "unlawful interference by any Japanese authorities or forces whatsoever." This was taken to include interference with American rights in Shanghai and elsewhere in China, such as have occurred recently. This demand might be summarized as a reiteration of American insistence on the "open door" in China.

Meanwhile, no response was received from the Japanese in regard to President Roosevelt's request that Emperor Hirohito be advised that he was "deeply shocked and concerned" over the bombing of the American vessels. Secretary of State Cordell Hull declined to discuss that aspect of the President's instructions.

Asked at his press conference if he expected a reply from the Emperor of Japan, the President replied that his memorandum spoke for itself. Thus it would seem that as far as the President's reference to the Emperor is concerned the next move is up to the Japanese. Persons familiar with Japanese customs pointed out that the Emperor is regarded in his country as a person of divine origin and above direct participation in the affairs of government.

Mr. Roosevelt at his press conference referred inquiries regarding the situation which has grown out of the Panay sinking to the State Department, but he did say that no change was contemplated in this Government's plans for evacuation of American nationals from danger zones in China.

Meanwhile, American Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson in China reported to the State Department that George T. Atcheson of his staff, and Capt. Frank Roberts, assistant American military attache, who were aboard the Panay when the vessel was bombed, "are all right" but that J. Hall Paxton and Emilie Gassie, also of the embassy staff, were "both wounded, neither seriously."

He also reported the U. S. S. Oahu, accompanied by a Japanese gunboat and by the British gunboats Bee and Ladybird, were taking to Shanghai all survivors of the Panay tragedy "except such wounded as may have to be attended in Wuhu, as it is no longer possible for them to go to Hankow." He confirmed the deaths of Charles L. Ensminger, storekeeper aboard the Panay, and Sandri Sandi, Italian journalist, a refugee from Nanking aboard the Panay.

been before us? How can we be discharged from a bill that is in the Judiciary Committee and has never been reported out of there?

Would Amend Rules.

"This monstrosity in the rules of the House is a perfect example of the anomalous situation caused by the petition system."

O'Connor said later that at some future date he will seek revision of House rules to amend the situation.

Since seven legislative days must elapse before floor consideration can begin; since discharge petition motions can be made only on the second and fourth Mondays; and finally, since the House almost certainly will not be in session December 27, the second Monday in January—that is, January 10—will be Ludlow's first opportunity to call up his measure.

Leaders have been caught off-balance completely on the Ludlow petition. It had only 175 names when the special session began. They sprang into action belatedly last week, and Chairman Hatton W. Sumners, Texas, of the Judiciary Committee, announced hearings would begin today on the bill—a move expected to halt further signatures and thus lock up the bill indefinitely.

The amendment would provide that a majority of citizens must vote "yes" on the question: "Shall the United States declare war on ———?" before the Congress can declare war. Opponents assert the proposal would make for a civil war within the country as well as war without. A two-thirds vote of both houses, and approval by 36 State Legislatures is required before it becomes the law of the land.

Ludlow, confused but happy at his sudden success, promised he would be fair in apportioning the six hours of debate he obtained.

Our Share Of Responsibility.

The note sent the Japanese government concerning the sinking of the Panay is the strongest diplomatic protest made by the United States since the close of the World War. Indeed, it is not dissimilar in tone and content to the series of communications which, when rejected by Berlin, forced this country into hostilities with Germany.

Yet none can argue that the note is in any respect stronger than the circumstances demand. And just because these circumstances are so outrageous, even as recounted in the Japanese official version, it was to be expected that Tokyo would promptly offer apologies and indemnification. No adequate guarantees against repetition are contained in the Japanese note, which has crossed our own. But its wording is a welcome indication that cool heads in that foreign office recognize the magnitude of the issue between the two countries.

Meantime it is to be remembered that a not inconsiderable share of responsibility for the destruction of the Panay traces to our own country. Advocates of mandatory neutrality and a general scuttle-and-run policy have naturally made the Japanese militarists completely contemptuous of the United States. Legislation intimating that this country draws no distinction between an aggressor and his victim has, of course, encouraged the Japanese invasion of China. And the psychology involved has emboldened Japanese troops to treat with contempt any Americans who may happen to be in their path. They have had some reason for believing that the United States will refuse to accord even minimum protection to its own nationals.

Now, however, the Tokyo government should understand that our professional pacifists are not representative of American public opinion, and that it would be highly dangerous for Japanese troops to assume that Uncle Sam will swallow a long series of calculated affronts indefinitely. But it is tragic than an occurrence as dangerous as the deliberate bombing of an American warship should be necessary to get the record straight in this respect.

There is talk of breaking diplomatic relations with Japan, or of concentrating the fleet at Hawaii. Judging from the reasonable attitude now apparent in Tokyo such drastic measures should be unnecessary to secure a satisfactory settlement.

More to the point would be passage of a simple Congressional resolution — several such have already been introduced—declaring the neutrality act inapplicable to the Japanese invasion of China. This would leave the path open for economic sanctions, should they later seem advisable. More important, it would reverse the present suicidal policy of actually encouraging Japanese warlords to flout our long-standing treaty rights in China.

In The Lists.

There is no end to the making of books, and still less so to the making of book-lists. Indeed, it seems improbable that you could walk very far down the street without encountering at least one earnest bibliographer, who would be significantly patting an inside pocket, and perhaps singing like Ko-Ko:

> As some day it may happen
> That a victim must be found
> I've got a little list—
> I've got a little list.

Some book-lists, of course, get more attention than others and the two that have got most attention lately present an interesting paradox.

There is the list of 100-odd "best books" compiled by the new administration at St. John's College. This is based on certain theories about education set forth by Dr. Robert M. Hutchins in "The Higher Learning in America." That work, however, is not included in the St. John's list, which begins with Homer and ends with Bertrand Russell.

The list of 200 books presented this week to the White House library includes Dr. Hutchins' volume. But with the exception of the Bible, it does not include any of the works selected by Dr. Hutchins' disciples—not even Newton's "Principia." The nearest thing to mathematics on the White House list are Carl Crow's "400 Million Customers" and Fanny Hurst's "We Are Ten." And the only philosophy is that of Santayana.

So far as we know the only person who was able to reconcile one book-list with another was the great Moslem chieftain, Amr. After Alexandria's capitulation Amr, ordering the destruction of the famous library, is reported to have said: "If those books are contrary to the Koran they are lies; if they agree with the Koran they are superfluous."

Which reminds us that we have a little book-list of our own which we are planning (advt.) to publish on next Sunday's Book Page. It is not, however, as concise as that of Amr.

The Wages And Hours Bill.

Representative Ramspeck has made a very strong appeal for prompt action on the wages and hours bill. "Let us vote on the matter and decide this question on its merits," he says. "Let us not send it back to the committee . . . but give business the opportunity now to know what wages they are going to have to pay and what conditions they are going to have to operate under."

There is no doubt that the controversy over the wages and hours bill keeps business in suspense and contributes to present economic uncertainty. Passage of legislation of the kind now under consideration, however, would not dissipate but increase these uncertainties. As Representative Mapes said during the House debate, "Business is already suffering from as bad a case of the jitters as it is possible for it to stand. Passage of the pending bill will only make confusion worse confounded."

It seems exceptionally poor political strategy to force through legislation that would raise production costs at a time when industrial activity is declining and unemployment mounting. But the chief objections to the wages and hours bill do not rest upon opportunistic arguments. Whether business is expanding or contracting, many industries would be seriously affected, as the French have discovered, by forced compliance with arbitrary standards of pay and hours of labor.

To prevent too violent industrial dislocation, with possible wholesale dismissals of workers, it would be necessary to lodge extensive discretionary power in the Federal administrative agency charged with enforcement of the proposed law. The alternative imposition of rigid statutory standards, as desired by the A. F. of L., would do irreparable damage to industries unable suddenly to adjust themselves to the new requirements.

In either case, whether standards were flexible or fixed by law, an army of Federal inspectors would be required to enforce them. Whether supreme enforcement power were lodged in the hands of a commission of five or a one-man board is a matter of administrative detail. One man or five, the task assigned would be beyond their capacity to discharge efficiently.

Opposition to the House bill as reported out of the Rules Committee is so strong, and comes from so many different groups and classes, that one is tempted to doubt whether anybody really wants the Federal Government to pass legislation of this type at this time. Objection comes from Democrats and Republicans, from Northern and Southern industrialists, from labor leaders as well as employers. Farm organizations, too, are outspoken in their criticism of a proposal that would, they believe, lower the purchasing power of the farmer's dollar. The fact that large numbers of workers would be unprotected by its provisions adds to the prevailing confusion.

There has been no adequate study of the proposed legislation to determine how many might be thrown out of work at varying wage levels, what would be its effect upon living costs, what would be the relative incidence of the regulations upon small industries. These and kindred questions of fundamental importance should certainly be examined before any Federal bureau is given the powers of control now contemplated.

A Courageous Stand.

It must have required real courage for Senator George, who represents an agricultural State, to denounce the farm bill as a means of granting "special privileges" to one particular group. Some Georgia cotton growers may resent the Senator's efforts to curtail the distribution of benefits from the Treasury. But that did not deter Mr. George from taking a positive stand on the solid foundation of principle.

Actually, of course, the best interests of agriculture are close to the Senator's heart. He realizes that special privileges for one group must lead to similar benefits for others. If the Government raises prices for farmers and coal producers, it will not be long before it will be raising other prices to compensate for these advantages. In the end that sort of rigid control over the economic system would react most seriously against agriculture.

Farmers who are clamoring for control of crops to raise prices are thinking only of immediate cash returns. Senator George, on the contrary, is concerned over the loss of markets resulting from such tactics. Drastic acreage restrictions, as he points out, are certain "to bring us constantly nearer and nearer to the point where we shall be producing cotton for our own markets only, when we shall have given up all hope of controlling at any fair or profitable prices any part of the foreign market."

In the contrast between these two attitudes may be found the difference between political expediency and statesmanship. The discouraging aspect of the debate on the farm bill is its indication that Congress has few legislators courageous enough to consider "special privilege" measures, of whatever kind, from the viewpoint of basic principles and ultimate consequences.

Up To The Commissioners.

As discussion of the Prettyman report begins, it is evident that the most serious obstacle to reorganization of the District government is the lack of a formula for division of the city's expenses between local and national taxpayers. Until that fundamental dilemma can be solved any system will labor under a severe handicap.

No one expected the citizens' efficiency committee to evolve a fiscal formula for Washington. That problem was not a part of its study. Yet the findings of the committee significantly emphasize the urgency of changing the present arrangement—or lack of arrangement. Congress is not likely to remove the local budget from control by the Federal Budget Bureau until there is some more definite means of determining annually what the Federal obligation to the Capital City should be. And, of course, any local government without exclusive authority to prepare its own budget would be hamstrung from the beginning.

For other reasons a fiscal understanding between the two governments is of the utmost importance. Year after year the Budget Bureau persistently recommends continuation of the "lump sum" in the previous appropriation act. Then Congress refuses to increase that amount because it has been suggested by the Budget Bureau. Under this "buck-passing" arrangement it is impossible to expand the Federal allowance in proportion to the increasing expenses of the city.

Congress did make one effort to cope with the problem. But it was a fiasco, culminating in the Jacobs report. That failure naturally discourages any new survey of the same type. But this situation makes it no easier to accept the present indefensible arrangement. Another approach to the problem is called for, and it will doubtless have to be initiated by the Board of Commissioners.

A citizens' committee should have been put to work on fiscal relations when Mr. Prettyman's investigators began their study of reorganization. But it is not yet too late to attack this obstacle to all progress in local municipal government. Extensive material on the subject is already available. All that is needed is the development of a workable formula from the facts already known. If a fair and reasonable plan can be devised, it may well be accepted by Congress as a means of ending a futile perennial controversy.

Certainly it is up to the Commissioners to make the next move toward solution of this dilemma. And the most effective move they could make would be to ask the advice of a group of outstanding citizens. If a satisfactory fiscal formula could thus be evolved, the fight to modernize Washington's haphazard political system would be off to a most effective start.

Still A Friend Of France.

Following the recent meeting at Rome of Mussolini and Premier Stoyadinovitch of Yugoslavia, the Italian press hinted broadly that this friendly exchange of views between the statesmen of once rival nations would be followed by Yugoslavia's adherence to the Berlin-Rome axis.

It was obviously a case of wishful thinking since Yugoslavia, while anxious to remain on good terms with its neighbor across the Adriatic, is also determined to keep its ties with France and the Little Entente. Proof of this is to be found in the cordiality with which Foreign Minister Delbos of France was greeted by Yugoslav statesmen on his arrival at Belgrade.

But aside from the official attitude of the Stoyadinovitch government, the people of Belgrade made known their own views in unmistakable fashion by using the Delbos visit as an occasion to organize enthusiastic demonstrations for France. These paralleled the equally enthusiastic outpouring of citizens in the Yugoslav capital to greet President Benes of Czechoslovakia on his visit to Belgrade last spring.

So far as these demonstrations reflect the popular will they showed that the people of Yugoslavia have no desire to join the dictators' bloc but want to remain linked with the French. Their cheers for France and Foreign Minister Delbos also suggest a desire to have democracy established in Yugoslavia as well. The dictatorship of King Alexander, which ended with the latter's assassination at Marseille three years ago, has been followed by a compromise regime which satisfies nobody. Even if it were so minded, which is doubtful, the Stoyadinovitch government could not in the face of Yugoslav public opinion commit Yugoslavia to the Berlin-Rome axis.

To Curb Lawsuits.

From the Boston Herald.

The Boston pretrial plan for simplifying court procedure and accelerating justice is spreading over the entire United States. The plan originated with Circuit Judge Joseph A. Moynihan, of Detroit, and was brought here after investigation by Justice Louis S. Cox and Executive Clerk Phinney, of the Superior Court. Boston proved the workability of the plan and publicized it.

Put into effect for Suffolk County on September 1, 1935, it was extended the next year to Essex County. Then the judicial council of New York, after observation here, recommended its adoption for the cities of that State. Los Angeles followed, and the Texas Bar Association unanimously approved the practice. Now the Supreme Court of the United States is expected within a few months to approve it for the district courts of the Nation.

The plan is simplicity itself. Within a fortnight of the date assigned for a trial, the parties appear before a judge, who explores the possibility of a settlement without trial. If trial is unavoidable, the judge seeks to determine the actual triable issue and to obtain agreement as to facts and witnesses. Many trials are thus obviated, expense and time are saved for the overburdened Superior Court, and witnesses and attorneys escape much inconvenience. Preview might serve as a descriptive term for the process.

Letters To The Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

Routing The Slump.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Critics should not blame the President for the present slump. He cannot balance the budget, relieve unemployment and find a market for our overproduction of farm and manufactured products. The curtailment of Government buildings, schools, courthouses, postoffices, roads, bridges and other projects, with the harvesting of a bumper crop, made about 20 men for every job.

Something must be done for those in distress, but a change must be made in the spending so that those who need the least will not get the largest share, as at Greenbelt, where a craftsman, for walking around looking wise, drew $16 a day, his wife held a Government position paying $10 a day, while World War veterans had to support a family on $59 a month.

About the poorest in the United States are the 1,831,000 share-croppers and tenant farmers who should be given relief before the 200,000 aliens. How many Americans are on relief in Germany or Italy?

Housing will help if the Government does not guarantee over 80 per cent on a house built for a man making $2 a day.

JOHN RIGGLES.
Seabrook, Md., Dec. 18.

Grammatical Controversy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent grammatical controversy evoked by Prof. Janet R. Aiken, of Columbia University, calls to mind a similar episode of past ages.

At the council of Constance, in the year 1414, the Archbishop Placentinus criticized some grammatical errors of the Emperor Sigismund. The Emperor, it seems, considered the disregard of grammatical rules a royal prerogative, and angrily replied: "Ego sum rex Romanus et supra grammaticiam."

The archbishop, however, did not share the royal viewpoint and quite disrespectfully, retorted: "Caesar non supra grammaticos."

Secret Budget-Making.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to congratulate you on your excellent editorial, "Hearings in the Dark," in The Post of December 13. The dictatorial budget procedure you criticize is wholly undemocratic and is based on a false conception of budget-making. No fiscal process is more in need of the assistance and light that many minds can give than the budget-making one. It is in effect a legislative process notwithstanding legalistic hocus-pocus to the contrary. The effect of improper budgeting is to provide long hours, overtime and improper working conditions as certainly as if laws requiring such terms of employment were passed.

As a result of the veil of secrecy thrown about the budget estimates until it is too late to modify or affect the final recommendation of the committee, the wages, the hours, and the working conditions of 800,000 Government employes are determined in a star chamber proceeding.

The United Federal Workers of America indorses and commends your editorial on the District of Columbia budget; but we wish to point out that the budget-making process is bad not only as it affects the District of Columbia budget, but with regard to every department of government as well. We hope you will extend your remarks to cover the other secret budget estimates now being considered by the several subcommittees. JACOB BAKER,
President, United Federal Workers of America.

On Boycotting Japan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of December 11 you carried a letter signed by "Statistician" regarding a proposed boycott against Japan. He showed with statistics how profitable it is for our country to continue trade with her and how much we would likely lose if a boycott should be applied.

That is one side of the question—but it should be of very small consideration. Would it not be well to remember that in this war of aggression our country—its citizens—are supplying the aggressor with the provisions of war, against a country which is largely defenseless, and which is generally considered the innocent party? And, by so doing, are we not a silent partner to Japan's overt act?

If we follow the policy of immediate expediency we not only prepare ourselves to reap the fruits of such a policy, but we align ourselves with the side of destruction, rather with constructive policies, and with a nation which, in its present aggression, has violated its own pledge, in the League of Nations Covenant, in the Nine Power Pact and in the Kellogg Treaty.

"Statistician" would preserve our trade with Japan, but has he thought that when Japan, through our help, conquers China, it will mean that our trade with China will be practically at an end? In other words, it means preserving our trade with 70,000,000 people and losing it with 430,000,000. I know that recent statistics show that, in dollars, our trade with Japan is more than it is with China. But recent years have been abnormal years, and the development that China is sure to make—if not held down by Japan—would create a market far more valuable than can ever be expected in Japan. A. J. BALCUM.
Charleston, S. C., Dec. 11.

Who Wants It?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Do we know of any other Presidential aspirant who is more deserving and better qualified for the position than Herbert Hoover? Conditions are no better now than they were in 1932. Deeper in debt and more unemployed than before.

He was not responsible for the previous recession, and is as much entitled to another term as the incumbent. But he is sane enough not to want it, with a hostile backing in Congress. He was sincere when he made a remark to that effect.

Would it not be assuming too much for him to say he would not accept a renomination? He has more brains than those who accuse him of fostering it. If Landon does not want it, who does?

FRISBEY GILBERT.
Washington, Dec. 13.

Reaction To The Panay Incident.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An American warship has been bombed by the Japanese, who now proffer their "terrible sorry" that such a "mistake" could have been made!

The Japanese army is running true to form, the form which has characterized its conduct of all recent wars, and only those really ignorant of how the Japenese conduct war recognize any sincerity in the plea that the bombing was a "mistake." Posted military authorities recognize the fact that Japan is serving notice to Great Britain and the United States to get out of the warfare zone, or take the consequences, and what the consequences are is exhibited in the case of the gunboat Panay.

Study the record of the Japanese army in Siberia during 1918 and 1919, when an American contingent under Gen. Graves formed part of an allied force. A Japanese general was chief of this inter-allied force and his ruthfulness in using his troops to intimidate the Russians and sink the fear of Japan deep into their hearts was so savage that for years the American records pertaining to the expedition were secret documents. Time after time he deceived the American troops, always softsoaping them thereafter with the same kind of "humble apologies" with which Japan is covering up the Panay incident today.

When Col. Morrow protested about Russian butchery as being uncivilized the Japanese told him to run along and tend to his own business, that some day Japan would have to fight Russia, so why not kill off as many Russians then, leaving fewer eventually to fight! Any informed officer who served with the Siberian expedition will tell you that the Panay incident is a typical Japanese way of waging warfare, and the quicker foreign nations realize that fact the better it will be for all concerned. The little brown man is feeling his stride, and stepping out!

In 1900 the Panay incident would have meant war. But the United States will not go to war for many incidents like Panay. Public sentiment won't stand for war. That being the case, why not remove those things occasioning incidents like the Panay one? HARRY SOUNDERS.
Washington, Dec. 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Do you happen to know which one of the governmental departments has available certain figures—figures which would inform us as to the cost in dollars and cents of the two slogans: "He kept us out of war" and "Too proud to fight"?

Also which one could tell us whether they were translated into other languages aside from German, Italian and Japanese?

You may as well be able to inform us whether, in addition to the apology the Japanese offered for the sinking of the United States gunboat, they have ordered the court-martial and prompt execution of the aviator guilty of the deed. If he did it as a personal idea of a joke, it would seem that general discipline in the Japanese army indicates that he should be executed for entertaining such a distorted conception of fun.

His act certainly is a step toward the loss of many Japanese lives for which his idea of a joke, or scorn of the United States Government will be responsible. How long are we to continue the expensive habit of endeavoring to lead mad bulls by a No. 60 cotton thread?

That number thread, be it cotton or silk, will do for young ladies' lacey step-ins, but not for leading bulls, even if they have rings in their noses.

GRANT SHEPHERD.
Hillsboro, N. C., Dec. 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How should the American public commit themselves in regard to the Japanese aggression, and Japanese destruction of American property? We should not jump into war at once with Japan, but as we want American lives and American property respected in the future we should demand reparations. The Japanese cannot give life back to the Americans whom they carelessly killed, but they should be requested to restore totally all American property. This is the least that we should demand of Japan. Our good American Government aims to follow the wishes of the people, so if the majority wish is not followed it is the people's fault for not letting their wishes be made known to Congress. Americans wishing for the United States to be treated better in the future should let their Congressmen and Senators know that they wish a request be made to Japan for damages for all American property, whether buildings or ships.

Some people may not know, but American hospitals, other buildings with the American flag in plain sight, as well as ships known to be owned by the Americans, were fired on intentionally by the Japanese. It is our duty to request restoration at once, with a boycott until we receive satisfaction. We have more than enough reasons for carrying out that "quarantine" suggested by our far-sighted President.

Many Americans are individually boycotting Japanese goods. Many more voters are anxious that their representatives and country would reserve the right not to sell when we believe the products and guns will be used to murder innocent victims. A READER.

The Post Impressionist

The Fate Of George Baker.

I HAD dinner at the Summit Inn one evening recently. It is a medium-priced restaurant on a corner in one of the northwest neighborhood centers—a neighborhood which gives signs of going to seed. But the inn itself is as trim and neat as ever, with its framed hunting prints on the walls, its subdued ligats and its scholarly, courteous colored waiters.

In the pause between giving my order and the appearance of the fruit cup I got to thinking of the first meal I had eaten here. It was back in 1928, when I was visiting Washington for the first time; and I had come here with George Baker, whose sister had given me a letter of introduction to him.

George Baker had, at that time, a nice position in the Department of Agriculture, where he helped prepare one of the department's many crop reports. I had to go around to his office to present my letter, and I thought when I met him that the office suited George perfectly.

It was in an old brick building south of the Mall, a venerable structure in whose halls hung the clean yet faintly musty aroma which seems to permeate old Government office buildings. I went up several floors in a slow, creaking elevator, down a hall and through a narrow arched passage. George's office had an old-fashioned roller-top desk, and a faded map of the United States on the wall, and a table covered with piles of dusty Government publications. And, as I said, George and the office blended very well.

He was a small man in his late thirties, prematurely bald and prematurely mature in manner, slow and dignified in speech as minor Government officials are apt to be. Yet he had a friendly twinkle in his eye, and a dry wit that kept glancing through his conversation. And as I sat and listened to him talk about his work, and his beloved reports, I looked around the dingy yet snug little room and thought that here was a man, if ever there was one, who had found his niche.

He asked me to have dinner with him that evening, and I rode uptown with him in his ancient little coupe, and sat around his comfortable room on the second floor of a private house, while he had a shower and a change of clothes. Then we went to the Summit Inn for dinner—he never ate anywhere else—and I saw at once that this was the high spot of George's day.

A group of minor Government officials, all very much like George, had dinner there about 7 every evening. The restaurant had provided a special table for their exclusive use. Of course, they called it "The Round Table," but it wasn't round, just a long table seating eight or ten, and this group always had dinner together and then sat for awhile afterward and talked. Pipes were brought out and filled and lit. Thick clouds of smoke hung in the air as opinions on the questions of the day were voiced in judicial tones.

Do you remember those opinions of 1928—those smug, complacent opinions of the Coolidge era? All about how we had reached a new but permanently high plateau of prosperity. Well, that was the sort of thing that you heard at the Round Table, between puffs on the pipes.

Afterward George might attend a lecture at the parish hall of his church, or go to the monthly Laymen's League meeting. Occasionally he would take in a movie, but not often, because he didn't think much of movies. Or he would just go back to his comfortable room and read the editorials and the stock market reports in the evening paper. And so to bed.

And what happened to George since then? His little investments were swept away during the depression, and in 1933 he lost his job. Remember the economy act of that year? It did away with George's division at one swoop. And there was George, bewildered, flustered, desperate, like a barnacle torn loose from its piling.

He got a job finally, in the Triple A; but it was a job that he hated. He had to work in a packed room, crowded with hurrying people and clamorous with the racket of mechanical calculating machines. After that he was sent out in The Field. He lives in barren hotel rooms in Western cattle and farming towns, and spends his days in murky produce sheds or tramping through the mire of stockyards. The cozy little office and the snug routine are gone. Even the old brick office structure he worked in has been torn down to make room for the all-engulfing Agriculture Building.

I was thinking of this as I ate my dinner the other evening at Summit Inn. The Round Table isn't in its old corner there any more, and the men who sat around it in the evening are probably scattered and gone. The neighborhood, formerly populated by well-paid Government employes, has run down; a nondescript class have filtered in who have little appreciation for the neatness and good service of a place like the Summit, and the dining room, which was once crowded and cheerful in the evening, is now half empty.

And as I thought about George Baker it seemed that his fate was a minor example of what happens to people who get caught in the cold winds of change that are blowing through the world today. Of course, George was luckier than many; he has a job, at least. But he was so snug, so secure, so used to his little rut—and so little fitted for another! Somehow, as I reflected on it over the dessert, it seemed a pity.

White Tie And Tails.

THE FULL dress suit, which is compulsory at the Gridiron dinners in Washington, is unquestionably the most expensive male costume outside the military and diplomatic uniformed ranks. It costs as much as $200, although it is possible to buy ready-mades for $50, but the point is that unless a man is an actor, a Cabinet member or a night club rounder, to whom the full dress suit is a professional uniform, like the farmer's overalls or the horseshoer's leather apron, he wears it too seldom to get his money's worth.

PEGLER.

It is not uncommon for a man to buy a dress suit for one special event and never have occasion to wear it again, and the Bureau of Standards has ascertained that the average number of wearings is just a fraction over three at an average cost of $35 per wearing.

The rest of the time dress suits hang in closets, and between events men outgrow them and mislay the incidental equipment, such as the white tie with the snapper in the back, the pearl thing for the middle of the shirtfront and the cuff links, which must be platinum, white gold or aluminum.

Then all of a sudden there comes a heavy date at which the subject feels that he must be present lest it be thought that he cannot afford a dress suit, and there is great confusion marked by cries of "where is that pearl thing for the middle of my shirtfront?" and "Look how these pants have shrunk!"

If there is time the pants can be let out from behind, where the tailors usually leave some overlap for expansion, but if the subject waits until the last minute to inspect his equipment he chokes himself into the pants until he sits down at the table, where he can let go a couple of top buttons and cover up with his napkin.

• • • •

MOST MEN, however, usually put off inspection until the last minute, and always at the hotels in Washington on Gridiron nights the bellhops are run ragged chasing around the stores buying those pearl things and white vest harness, patent leather slippers and all.

Men say they do not like to dress up in this costume, and, in fact, they don't, because the fear of losing or forgetting something essential until after the stores are closed makes for nervous indigestion and destroys all the pleasure. But after they are dressed up they like it pretty well, as may be seen in the way they swish their tails and give themselves the how-do-you-do in the mirrors.

They all hope they look like Fred Astaire, even little potty guys and big jowly guys. However, nobody really looks like Astaire, because looking like Fred Astaire is a business with him. If anybody could do it there would be no money in being Mr. Astaire.

The coat is an uneasy garment because it doesn't have any side pockets. A man goes to put his hand in his pocket for something and asks himself, "Hey, where is my side pocket?" Then he remembers, "Oh, yes, I am in full dress—looking like Fred Astaire." (Looks at self in mirror.)

• • • •

THE COAT of the suit doesn't meet in front, being purposely scant so as to display the white vest, which is a phony with phony buttons on it and really just a harness which goes over the head and holds together with a strap in the back. The breast of the coat is padded to make it puff out with manliness, and the effect is rather good except that so many tailors make the collar wrong. The collar slips down, disclosing the metal snapper in the back of the necktie and exposing the fact that the tie is stuffed, not tied.

Most of them are stuffed, not tied, but it is embarrassing, nevertheless, to feel that the snapper is showing, so in any dress suit gathering men may be seen constantly hunching their shoulders to get the collar up or scrunching down and carrying themselves stoop-shouldered for the same effect.

The social power of the dress suit is a strange mystery. It is only a suit of clothes deliberately designed to be of no practical use, and the accoutrements that go with it are rank foolishness and vanity. Yet at a dress suit occasion the man who has one is socially acceptable and the man without one is untouchable, even though everyone knows that in personal qualities, such as honor, ability and all, the values are exactly the reverse.

And Aleck Troyanovsky, the Soviet Ambassador, wears one on formal occasions, but Earl Browder, the boss Communist in this country, refuses to wear full dress, presumably on the ground that it is the uniform of the capitalist enemy forces in the war of the masses against the classes.

Reforming The Stock Market.

Well, it now seems possible that the New York Stock Exchange will have salaried officials, including efficiency experts, press agents, ticket takers and even Roxy ushers.

• • • •

The governing committee has named a committee of nine to consider the whole proposition of a new set-up under a salaried president. Some of the boys have at last swung around to the idea that if the brokers are to be bossed around the bossing might as well be done by their friends.

• • • •

The SEC insists that, despite all the Government has done, it is still too easy for the visiting tourist to lose money, even if he is only in the market for sight-seeing purposes.

• • • •

The Government wants the exchange made safe for women and children. And it thinks things should be softened up to a point where men can play it without nose-guards.

• • • •

Already Uncle Sam has swamped the exchange with rules prohibiting triple passes, gouging and the use of the customer-in-the-soup formation, but it isn't satisfied. It has at last driven the exchange into reform from within and we may ultimately see all stock exchanges in the country featuring rest rooms, cocktail lounges and music.

• • • •

One suggestion is that only one stock be sold to a customer and that trading stamps be given with every purchase.

• • • •

Another is that no customer under the age of 35 be allowed to enter the market.

• • • •

The following signs all over the stock exchanges of America are now a possibility:

"The Management Will Appreciate all Suggestions Conducive to the Comfort of Customers."

• • • •

"If You Don't See What You Want, Ask for It."

• • • •

"Unhappy or Dissatisfied Patrons Are Invited to File Complaints at the Front Office."

• • • •

"All Goods Guaranteed or Your Money Back."

• • • •

"Try Our Certified Securities. Look for the Blue Label."

• • • •

"Adults Not Admitted Without Chaperons."

• • • •

The stock markets are going to be quite some places when the Government gets through with 'em. It may ultimately be impossible to get into the market at all unless you are properly proposed and have letters from three prominent people testifying that you are a fit person to take chances.

The Jungle Again?

Geneva Observer Sees In League Failure Collapse Of All International Law With Return To World Anarchy Looming.

By C. Poznanski.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

ONE OF the most popular of current catchwords is "the failure of the League of Nations." There can be no doubt that the ideal of collective security has not been attained. There can be no doubt that League action has not succeeded in preventing the conquest of Manchuria, nor that of Ethiopia.

Of course one could point out, and easily enough, that there have been considerable achievements to counterbalance the spectacular failures. The assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia, as well as the Letitia incident, might, but for the existence of the League, have led to wars. The smooth liquidation of the Saar plebiscite was also possible only by League machinery.

One might even point out that the failures of the League have never been complete. So far Manchukuo has not been recognized as a sovereign state. In the Ethiopian war sanctions against a great power were applied. They were applied half-heartedly, perhaps; they were called off by Great Britain, perhaps prematurely. Nevertheless, the fact remains that there was an attempt to enforce collective action against an aggressor. And as regards the Sino-Japanese war a resolution has already been adopted by the Assembly recommending that member states help China.

Let us, however, for the sake of argument admit that the failure of the League is complete.

War Dire Necessity Seems Only Conclusion.

IT WOULD—prima facie—mean that the new system of international law devised by the makers of the League Covenant is inapplicable. It would—prima facie—mean that humanity must return to the old system of international law, which formerly regulated the relations between nations, renouncing the idealist formulas of the new law as embodied in the Covenant and in the Kellogg-Briand Treaty. It would mean acceptance of war as a dire necessity.

But if such were the position, it would be possible to affirm that the attempt of 1919 to place international relations on a new basis of justice instead of force, has failed simply because of the lack of statesmanship on the part of the shapers of the Covenant, and that a new departure on a different basis remains possible.

But, in fact, what has happened is much more than a simple failure of the League of Nations. Though it is hardly realized by public opinion, we are witnessing no more and no less than the collapse of the whole system of the traditional international law slowly elaborated for centuries.

We are not going back to the complete absence of any rules governing the relations between nations. From the time when, in the seventeenth century, Hugo Grotius wrote his standard work "De Jure Belli et Pacis" to the series of conventions signed at The Hague in 1899 and in 1907, there has been developed a whole system of rules of international law, rules which were binding for civilized states, which were respected even during the World War. It is these age-old rules which are no longer observed today.

Declaration Of War Tenet Of World Code.

THE FIRST principle or international law, universally recognized, was that there is an essential difference between the state of peace and the state of war. And there was a quite clear definition of what constituted a state of war. More than that, it was a general principle that a war must be declared. After the Japanese attack on the Russian fleet in 1903 the nations agreed that the declaration of war must precede any act of war.

Article I of the convention relative to the opening of hostilities at The Hagues on October 18, 1907, state expressly: "The contracting powers recognize that hostilities between themselves must not commence without previous and explicit warning, in the form either of a reasoned declaration of war or of an ultimatum with conditional declaration of war."

This rule was respected in 1914 as well by Austria and Germany as by Great Britain, the United States and their allies.

The League convention was signed and ratified by Japan. And we have witnessed and are witnessing the most savage war waged on China without any declaration of war, without even a state of war being admitted.

A second point established beyond any doubt in pre-war international law was that any help given to rebels by a third state was considered as an act of war. The state which helped the rebels was no longer a neutral, but a belligerent in respect of the government attacked by the rebels.

Notwithstanding his sympathy for the Polish insurgents of 1863, Napoleon III refused them help because it meant an act of belligerence against Russia. And at the end of the nineteenth century the help given by the Greeks to the insurgents of Crete led inevitably to a war against Turkey, just as at an earlier date Russian help to the Slav insurgents of 1876 led automatically to the Russo-Turkish war.

This principle also seems no longer to be acknowledged. That help has been given by the Italian and German governments to the Spanish insurgents is beyond doubt, and has been officially recognized. Nevertheless, Italy and Germany continue to be officially considered as neutrals, as is shown by the fact that they are members of the nonintervention committee.

The old rules of neutrality have also broken down. In the Sino-Japanese war of today we see the failure not only of the new principle of the League—that for League members there can be no neutrality, but rather an obligation of common action against the aggressor—but also the failure of the classical definition of the obligations of neutrals.

Spanish War Illustrates Neutrals' Weak Position.

THE SPANISH WAR gives striking examples of the complete disregard of the rights of neutral powers. When in 1904 the Russian fleet bombed English fisherboats off Hull, wrongly suspecting that they were Japanese destroyers, it nearly led to a war between Great Britain and Russia. The seizure by the Italians during the Libyan war of the French steamer Manouba led to the gravest political tension.

Today Franco's fleet of "unknown" submarines could seize or sink without warning merchant ships of all nations without any consequences whatever. For the Nyon agreement is simply a measure of self-defense against future attacks; it is not a settlement of illegal actions in the past.

One could also mention the bombing of Almeria, unprecedented in pre-war times and flatly contradicting all the rules of traditional international law; and there are many other examples.

From all this it seems clear that international law has completely collapsed. The nonintervention committee and the consultations between powers are measures of emergency, dealing mainly in terms of expediency. There no longer exist any guiding principles, and in consequence the attitude of the powers in any given case is unpredictable.

If all the principles of traditional international law can be violated without reaction, if there can no longer be any certainty as to which rules can be broken for reasons of expediency, we have gone, not years but centuries, backward.

The question is no longer of the return to the status of 1914, when there was no League of Nations. The question is of the return to the jungle, where there exists no law at all.

Age Of Fable

By Sir Willmott Lewis.

Big Business Mythology.

"THE FOLKLORE OF CAPITALISM" is a rich and rewarding book—rich in its content, and rewarding to him who is tough-minded enough to read it with care and without anger, and thus to profit by it. Mr. Arnold is a professor of law at Yale University, and in 1935 he wrote "The Symbols of Government." He spent a sabbatical year as a law officer of the American Government, and the fruits thereof are in this new volume, "The Folklore of Capitalism." Put the two works together, and you have what corresponds to a fugue, which is a contrapuntal composition with a "subject," or chief theme, and subordinate themes which recur, together with their "answers."

• • • •

MR. ARNOLD is concerned with our own day, and with the struggle in this country "of a new type of organization to obtain an accepted place in the folklore of the times," which folklore finds its principal expression in the literature of law and economics. He does not give dogma a bad name, and hang it. He knows that dogmas and creeds and symbols change as do clothes, are equally indispensable when religion is involved, and it is of "our political religion" that he writes. In the United States, he says, the mythology used to be very simple, and the predominant figure was the American businessman.

"It is this mythology, operating long after the American businessman has disappeared as an independent individual, which gives the great industrial organization an established place in our temporal government. Every demand on these great industrial structures is referred to the conception of the American businessman as a standard."

• • • •

EVERY INSTITUTIONAL MYTHOLOGY, however, must have a national devil, and the American devil is governmental interference. Thus the American people "firmly believe in the inherent malevolence of government which interferes with business." Accordingly, when it became necessary for the Government to fill gaps in the national structure in which private business enterprise was an obvious failure, myths and folklore "hampered practical organization at every turn."

It seemed to men to be more important to plan the culture of the future. They were more interested "in saving posterity from the evils of dictatorship or bureaucracy, in preventing the American people from adopting Russian culture on the one hand, or German culture on the other, than in the day-to-day distribution of food, housing and clothing to those who needed them."

• • • •

MUCH OF THE BOOK is a record of what happens when a disciplined, courageous mind studies and dissects the myths which have collected about the personification of great industrial enterprises, the endowment of corporations with the rights and prerogatives of free individuals. These chapters are rich in supporting evidence, in illustration by example, and above all they are witty and tolerant. They may be penitential reading for many lawyers and economists, but they should be obligatory reading for every editorial writer and columnist in the country. Mr. Arnold writes from within his subject, not from a plane morally above it. Let a few passages bear witness:

". . . The growth of great organizations in America occurred in the face of a religion which officially was dedicated to the preservation of the economic independence of individuals. In such a situation it was inevitable that a ceremony should be evolved which reconciled current mental pictures of what men thought society ought to be with reality . . . Trust-busting, therefore, became one of the great moral issues of the day, while at the same time great combinations thrived and escaped regulation."

"The net result of a folklore which gave business . . . agreeable and painless ways of levying tribute was to give business enterprise complete freedom. To this may be attributed our industrial development . . . Nevertheless, the same folklore which justified freedom to experiment on the part of industrial organizations offered the greatest handicap to similar activity on the part of the Government, even in fields where governmental activity was most imperatively needed."

"It set up standards by which the Government was judged by its failures, while an industrial organization was judged by its success and its failures were excused."

• • • •

PASSAGES LIKE THESE are the bones—not dry bones, by any means—about which Mr. Arnold builds by elaboration and example a living body of exposition. He brings to mind Walter Bagehot; the Bagehot of that fascinating book "Physics and Politics," which should have been called "Psychics and Politics;" the book in which it was unforgettably said that an early society has to form a large area of reflex action—a "cake of custom"—in order to attain stability, and that a later society has to break away from this area in order to achieve progress. He brings to mind Graham Wallas, who 30 years ago uttered the warning that "politics is only in a slight degree the product of conscious reason: it is largely a matter of subconscious processes of habit and instinct, suggestion and imitation." And he recalls these two not as a follower, but as one who has found his way of his own motion, their equal and their continuator.

He is neither embittered nor pessimist, he is tolerant and clear-eyed. "In the country of the blind," he says, "the man who can see is always classed as a radical or a cynic." He knows that any ruling class—and the industrial leaders of this country were for many years a ruling class—can exist only on the strength of the duties it performs and will perish because of the duties it forsakes. His way of putting this is to say that "the failure of older social organizations to act leaves a vacuum into which some new organization is bound to flow." Of John L. Lewis he says that he "is taking advantage of a social need which his opponents are unable to meet." And on the position of the President he has some shrewd and rememberable phrases.

• • • •

MR. ROOSEVELT, he finds, "has become a symbol for a political attitude which cannot yet be put into words," because no authoritarian literature has yet developed about it as it has about the Supreme Court. "He expresses for a majority of the public the current distrust of old myths and the belief that the Government has a new role to play in providing for the security of individuals in their jobs and in the distribution of goods." Against this personality, the lawyers and the economists, the manufacturers and the editorial writers, offer nothing but fears and inhibitions, "a list of impending disasters." They do everything to defeat their own ends "by refusing to advocate an attitude toward the function of government" which will make the personality of the President less important.

When a living man becomes a symbol, his position is precarious, "because dead men are much safer in such niches than the living." But, for all this, Mr. Arnold believes that the symbolic Roosevelt will endure until something else is substituted—"if he is beaten it will be by a philosophy of strong affirmation and not by attack."

• • • •

IN THE PARADISE reserved for philosophers there is a countryman of Mr. Arnold's who is delighted with "The Folklore of Capitalism." His name on earth was William James, and he gave to this country and the world what is called pragmatism, something as American as he was. Under this system, the criterion of the truth of a conception or an assertion is tested by the practical value of its effects on human interests and activities, and not by metaphysical, logical or ethical abstractions.

Mr. Arnold's targets are legal and economic abstractions, and no one in our time has riddled them more often or more expertly. His is one of those rare books which stimulate, refresh and encourage. Nothing more important, in the field of government and its relation to the everyday life of man, has been written for many a long year.

Discords—In A Music Store.

EVEN THE NAMES are musical. The young lady with the dark hair and the smile is called Lillian Lum. And the other young lady bears the name Mildred Miller. And music is their business.

McCARTHY.

Now you might not think that the job of selling phonograph records would be actually exciting, but apparently it's even more than that.

"To be a good salesman or saleswoman," said Miss Lum, "may be something of a job. But to sell records is an art. Have you ever heard of the 'Hot Dog' song?"

"Well," said Miss Lum, "we've heard of it. In fact when they ask for it, we produce it. We don't wait for explanations."

It appears that the "Hot Dog" song came into being last summer, and was first identified by the salesforce of one of the local music stores, when a very stern old gentleman came in and asked for Rudy Vallee's "Hot Dog" song.

"Of course you know it," he said, "Weenie-Weenie."

Miss Lum and Miss Miller pulled themselves together and solemnly passed across the counter a recording of "Veni-Veni."

• • • •

"THE POPULAR RECORDINGS aren't the worst source of our troubles," Miss Lum said. "But they are the cause of our embarrassment.

"The other day two young men came in, and we couldn't find out what they wanted. They shifted from foot to foot and they refused to get down to business.

"You ask her," the brown haired boy said.

"No, you ask her," the younger boy said.

"By that time," said Miss Lum, "I was at least curious. In fact, I think I was beginning to get embarrassed."

According to Miss Lum the brown haired boy and the lighter haired boy shifted from foot to foot and argued it over. They really didn't know how to begin. Finally the brown haired boy gave in and blurted out the question. But he was very careful in doing so.

"Young lady," he said, "I'm not trying to get fresh, but do you have 'Hot Lips.' I mean we want to buy the record."

"Of course," said Miss Lum, "they wanted Henry Busse's recording of 'Hot Lips,' but it was embarrassing all the same."

Miss Lum looked rather downcast and you could see from her look that being a salesgirl of phonograph records was no cinch. Then Miss Miller added her bit.

"We don't need to talk about the jazz records," she said. "We have just as much trouble selling the classical. The other day we had a lady who wanted the 'Quartet from Rigoletto' as sung by one voice, preferably a soprano."

"What she wanted," said Miss Miller, "was probably Edgar Bergen."

"Rigoletto," said Miss Lum, "seems to be the choice of the 'I-really-wouldn't-know' customers. The other day a lady came in and asked for the 'Rigoletto Quartet from Aida.'"

• • • •

BUT THAT TYPE of customer, at least, tries hard. The phonograph record customers who irritate Miss Lum and Miss Miller are the kind who want them to do all the work.

They don't mind the woman who comes in and says: "I'd like to hear some nice waltzes." She actually buys them. They object to the customer that expects them to be psychic. One woman was really a problem.

"I was waiting for a street car, no less than 10 minutes ago," the woman said, "when I heard this song. It was lovely."

"Can you give us the name," Miss Lum asked.

"No," said the customer, "I just heard it over a radio playing in a passing car."

"How about the composer or the words," Miss Lum asked.

"I told you," said the customer, "that I just heard a snatch of it but it was beautiful."

"Did you hear any of the words?" Miss Lum asked.

"Yes," said the customer, "it was about love! Do you think you could find it?"

"And 90 per cent of them," said Miss Lum, "are about love."

• • • •

THE SALESGIRLS of phonograph records get used to hearing people come in and ask if they have "Black Eyes," or "Patches." They get used to seeing the customer go into the booths to play over a record and then proceed to swing, sway and tap dance. But they can't become accustomed to the questions.

"Do you have the mystery song?" one lady wanted to know. "It's very popular."

"Could you tell us a little more about it?" said Miss Miller.

"It's a nice tune and everybody's whistling it," the customer said.

"The mystery song she wanted," said Miss Miller, "turned out to be 'Whispers in the Dark.' Very mysterious."

But the salesgirls are still chuckling about the colored boy that came in to buy a record. And though he called it wrong, he knew what he wanted.

"Do you have 'Streamlined Baby?' he asked. "It's by Fats Waller."

"You don't by any chance mean "She's Tall, She's Tan, She's Terrific?'" Miss Lum asked.

"Yas'm," the colored boy said, "you shore got it that time."

"He," said Miss Lum, "at least had the idea."

Text of Japan's Note on Panay

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Dec. 14.—The text of Japan's note, handed by Foreign Minister Hirota to United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew, regarding the sinking of the United States gunboat Panay:

"Regarding the incident of December 12 in which the United States gunboat Panay and three steamers belonging to the Standard Oil Co. were sunk by bombing of Japanese naval aircraft at a point about 26 miles above Nanking, I had the honor, as soon as unofficial information of the incident was brought to my knowledge, to request your excellency to transmit to the United States Government apologies from the Japanese government.

"From reports subsequently received from our representatives in China it has been established that the Japanese airforce, acting on information that Chinese troops were fleeing from Nanking and were going up the river by steamer, took off in pursuit, and discovered such vessels at the above-mentioned point. Owing to poor visibility, however, the aircraft, although they descended to fairly low altitudes, were unable to discern any mark showing any of them was an American ship or man-of-war.

"Consequently the United States gunboat Panay and the vessels of the Standard Oil Co., being taken for Chinese carrying fleeing Chinese troops, were bombed and sunk.

"While it is clear in the light of the above circumstances that the present incident is entirely due to a mistake, the Japanese government regret most profoundly that it has caused damage to a United States man-of-war and ships and casualties among those aboard and desire to present hereby our sincere apologies.

"The Japanese government will make indemnifications for all losses and deal appropriately with those responsible for the incident. Furthermore, they already have issued strict orders to the authorities on the spot with a view to preventing recurrence of a similar incident.

"The Japanese government, in fervent hope that the friendly relations of Japan and the United States will not be affected by this unfortunate affair, have frankly stated as above their sincere attitude, which I beg your excellency to make known to your Government.

"I avail myself of this opportunity to renew expressions of my highest considerations."

Text of the American Protest

By the Associated Press.

The text of the United States note to Japan formally protesting the bombing of American war and commercial ships follows:

"The Government and people of the United States have been deeply shocked by the facts of the bombardment and sinking of the U. S. S. Panay and the sinking or burning of the American steamers Meiping, Meian and Meisian by Japanese aircraft.

"The essential facts are that these American vessels were in the Yangtze River by uncontested and incontestable right; that they were flying the American flag; that they were engaged in their legitimate and appropriate business; that they were at the moment conveying American official and private personnel away from points where danger had developed; that they had several times changed their position, moving upriver, in order to avoid danger; and that they were attacked by Japanese bombing planes.

"With regard to the attack, a responsible Japanese naval officer at Shanghai has informed the commander in chief of the American Asiatic fleet that the four vessels were proceeding upriver; that a Japanese plane endeavored to ascertain their nationality; flying at an altitude of 300 meters, but was unable to distinguish the flags; that three Japanese bombing planes, six Japanese fighting planes, six Japanese bombing planes, and two Japanese bombing planes, in sequence, made attacks which resulted in the damaging of one of the American steamers, and the sinking of the U. S. S. Panay and the other two steamers.

"Since the beginning of the present unfortunate hostilities between Japan and China, the Japanese government and various Japanese authorities at various points have repeatedly assured the Government and authorities of the United States that it is the intention and purpose of the Japanese government and the Japanese armed forces to respect fully the rights and interests of other powers.

"On several occasions, however, acts of Japanese armed forces have violated the rights of the United States, have seriously endangered the lives of American nationals and have destroyed American property. In several instances, the Japanese government has admitted the facts, has expressed regrets, and has given assurance that every precaution will be taken against recurrence of such incidents.

"In the present case, acts of Japanese armed forces have taken place in complete disregard of American rights, have taken American life, and have destroyed American property both public and private.

"In these circumstances, the Government of the United States requests and expects of the Japanese government a formally recorded expression of regret, an undertaking to make complete and comprehensive indemnifications; and an assurance that, definite and specific steps have been taken which will insure that hereafter American nationals, interests and property in China will not be subjected to attack by Japanese armed forces or unlawful interference by any Japanese authorities or forces whatsoever."

Britons Will Meet G. W. U. in Debate

The question of isolation will be debated by students of George Washington University and a British team from Oxford and Cambridge at 8:15 tonight in Corcoran Hall, with Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, presiding.

James A. Brown, of Oxford, and Wayne Kniffen, of George Washington, will uphold isolation, while Ronald V. Gibson, of Cambridge, and John P. Southmayd, of George Washington, will oppose political aloofness.

This afternoon the debaters will be guests of the English Speaking Union at a tea at 4:30 at the Willard Hotel. Sir Wilmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, will speak. The Britishers arrived in Washington yesterday after a six-week tour of the United States, during which they debated 22 collegiate teams.

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

Our busy little brown brothers across the Pacific have been overdue for a kick in the pants, but their seat is overstuffed with apologies.

* * * *

As yesterday's confabs at the White House and State Department showed, their diplomatic ju-jitsu has us tied in diplomatic knots. Their penitence is abysmal until the next time.

* * * *

Undeniably their basic position is sound. No one has any business in China unless he's shooting Chinamen. That's how it looks to a quarterback in the grandstand.

* * * *

"—England nominates us"

For 90 minutes Jap soldiers lined the riverbanks and watched 17 Jap planes plug away at a 20-foot American flag painted on the deck.

* * * *

It was the best show of the year, accident or blunder. Their marksmanship was putrid, they wasted more bombs than the boat was worth, but they deserve A for effort.

* * * *

Maybe their aviators are color-blind. They ought to learn to recognize the American flag; they may see more of it.

* * * *

Britain wants to administer that overdue kick in the pants, but Britain has a sore toe and nominates us to hold Japan while she kicks.

* * * *

Probably it will boil down to this: Many patriotic Americans will scorn Japanese toys for Xmas, if they can find any others in the final shopping rush.

* * * *

But that wouldn't be fair, as the Jap foreign office will be first to point out, because Japan is playing Santa Claus to the Chinese, and you mustn't boycott Santa before Xmas.

"—we mustn't boycott Santa"

The adjective Rooseveltian means different things at different times. At one time it might have meant a wireless like this to the Son of Heaven:

* * * *

"Unless you declare an armistice in China within 48 hours to give us a chance to evacuate our refugees we may be forced to send bigger ships—to evacuate our refugees, of course."

* * * *

That would be in the same vein of humor as yesterday's Japanese announcement that Japan is the only stabilizing force in China; and our cynical little brown brothers would understand what we meant.

* * * *

Things seemed fairly stable in China before the Japanese generals and admirals and other Santa Clauses hitched up their reindeer last summer, and none of our gunboats were sinking in the Yangtze.

Unless we can hold out for an armistice in China before the "stabilization" spreads further, we might as well turn the whole thing over to Jim Farley and let him ask the Japs to mail their New Year's apologies early.

Or we might stop fumbling these annoying diplomatic "incidents" and just leave them to our children to settle after our little brown brothers run out of apologies.

District Bar Asks Public 'Defender'

Would Have Official With $20,000 Staff to Protect Accused.

Two-Year College Requirement Tabled at Meeting.

Approval in principle of creation of the office of public defender for the District with assistant and clerical staff to cost $20,000 a year was voted last night by the District Bar Association at its monthly meeting in the Mayflower Hotel.

In a resolution the association advocated a term of four years for the defender at a salary of $7,500 a year with an assistant to be appointed for a similar term at a yearly wage of $4,000 together with a clerical staff as needed by the business of the office.

Pending Bill "Inadequate"

A public defender bill pending in Congress was scored by the association as inadequate and obsolete. The association recommended that the measure be returned to the proper Congressional committee and revised.

The bill, the association held, fails to provide a sufficient staff of defenders and a means of financing the office.

Under the present system of appointment by judges of the District courts of defenders for persons unable to employ counsel, the association complained that attorneys so named have to use their own funds. No attempt is made, the association charged, to rotate appointments.

Study Rule Tabled.

A resolution advocating two years of pre-legal college study as a prerequisite for admission to the District bar was tabled by a vote of the association after less than five minutes' discussion. The association decided to refer the proposal to a committee directed to study the question of whether the "association should go on record" on the proposition.

The resolution was sponsored by the association's committee on standards of legal education, headed by James J. Hayden. Its provisions, considered previously by the Women's Bar Association here and approved by the American Bar Association, have brought widespread protests by groups of Washington lawyers who saw in it a threat to graduates and students of three Washington law schools not requiring college work for admission.

Wasserman Tests Approved at G. W.

Wasserman tests for George Washington University students were approved yesterday by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university.

The tests will be afforded the students for a two-week period and will be under the direction of the University Health Administration. Last week Dr. Marvin disapproved of the student plan for Wasserman tests, which would have been administered by senior medical students.

Howard Ennes, editor of the university's publication, has been leading the anti-syphlis campaign at the school. Following Dr. Marvin's action last week, Ennes held a conference with Dr. Marvin and Dr. Daniel LeRay Borden, director of the health service, and the proposed tests were approved.

Christmas Party To Benefit Needy

The Sons of the American Legion will hold a Christmas party in Stansbury Hall, 5832 Georgia avenue, tonight at 8 o'clock. Proceeds will be used for the child welfare committee of the District department of the legion.

There will be vaudeville, a minstrel show and dancing. A bicycle will be awarded the holder of the lucky number. Lunch will be served.

As their ticket of admission, members are expected to bring a toy for delivery to a needy child. There will be a nominal charge for adults.

Antiques Destroyed as $50,000 Fire Levels Warrenton Manor

Yorkshire House, residence of Mrs. Katherine Fox Bowman, prominent Fauquier County, Va., social worker, was destroyed by fire yesterday as firemen stood by, made powerless by lack of water. Much furniture and a $3,000 pipe organ were saved but valuable antiques on the upper floors were turned to ashes. The blaze started when sparks ignited dry shingles.

Sight Saving Drive Arranged By D. C. Society

Preventive Work Outlined at Housewarming in New Quarters.

Plans for an extensive sight-saving campaign were discussed yesterday at a house-warming held by the District of Columbia Society for the Prevention of Blindness. The 2-year-old local society recently moved from the Council of Social Agencies to 839 Seventeenth street.

The slogan is "Let There Be Sight." Representatives of local social agencies attended yesterday's tea and discussed the society's program, which is aimed principally at conserving the sight of children. One project is the promotion of sight-saving classes.

The society also plans to give information about prenatal card and to co-operate with the District Health Department in examining the eyes of pre-school children. Convinced of the necessity of an oculist in the public school system, it hopes to persuade the Board of Education and Congress to fill this need.

Miss Agnes Peter, a member of the board, arranged the tea. She was assisted by Mrs. William H. Wilmer, the president, widow of Dr. Wilmer; Mrs. Allen L. Vories, first vice president, and Mrs. Mary Hopper Spencer, executive director.

Children's Hospital was represented by its social service director, Miss Lucia Murchsion. Miss Tennie Daugette, director of social service at Gallinger Hospital, also was eresent. Others included Miss Rowena Rorbye, director of Georgetown Children's Home; Dr. C. E. Rice of the Social Security Board; Miss Gertrude Bowling, director of the Instructive Visiting Nurses Society; Miss Irene Grant of the Veterans Administration, and Dr S. B. Muncaster, second vice president of the society.

Dr. Benjamin Rones and Maj. Gen. M. W. Ireland, of the advisory board, were present. Members of the board of directors included Dr. William T. Davis, Mrs. Howard G. Nichols and Joshua Evans.

$17 Minimum Wage For Women Settled

The $17 minimum wage for women in retail stores which was set last month was not contested yesterday when the minimum wage board held its last public hearing.

Since no persons appeared at the hearing either to defend or attack the scale fixed, the $17 rate becomes mandatory within 60 days, or February 14.

In compliance with the law, any person was given the opportunity to appear at the public hearing and contest the scale fixed by the board.

U.S. Union Asks Increased Pay For Night Work

Engraving Bureau Local Indorses Proposal for 15 Pct. Raise.

Indorsement of legislation providing a 15 per cent increase in pay for night work in the Federal service was given by members of Local 105, National Federation of Federal Employes, at their Christmas party in the Willard Hotel last night.

Composed of women workers in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the membership of between 1,500 and 1,600 comprises the largest local women's unit in any organizatoin in the world.

Miss Anna Coburn, chairman of the membership committee, reported 50 new members had been admitted in the past two months.

With Alvin W. Hall, director of the bureau, and Mrs. Hall as guests of honor, the party included distribution of gifts from a lighted tree.

Entertainment was furnished by George H. O'Connor, accompanied by George Wilson, and talks of welcome by Hall, Luther W. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes; Miss Gertrude M. McNally, secretary-treasurer of the organization; Ulrey J. Biller, fifth vice-president of the national federation; John Smith, chief of the stamp division, and George M. Duncan, chief of the service and numbers division of the bureau.

Plumley Assails Delay on Pilots' Airport Pleas

'Near Criminal Negligence' Laid to Bureau of Air Commerce.

The Bureau of Air Commerce was charged with "near criminal negligence" for its failure to act on a petition of air line pilots to halt plane traffic at Washington-Hoover Airport by Representative Plumley (Republican) of Vermont, in a speech yesterday on the House floor.

Citing that the petition asking transfer of the air line base to Bolling Field was filed in October, Plumley said:

"So far as I know no action has been taken. How long are these pilots going to be compelled to endanger their lives and our own?

"We are going to wake up some morning to learn that one of the greatest air catastrophes in the annals of aerial navigation has occurred right here in the Capital. I call it about as near criminal negligence as anything of the kind could be not to do something in response to the petition of the men, who above all others, know what the situation is and what ought to be done."

Declaring that the Washington-Hoover Airport is "both a public menace and a national disgrace," Plumley urged Congress to take an interest in the need for a new flying field in or near Washington.

The Camp Springs airport bill, recommended by the Washington Airport Commission, is on the House calendar, but indications are it will not be voted on before the regular session.

Lacking Water, Firemen Watch Home Leveled

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., Dec. 14.—While firemen, handicapped by lack of water, stood by helpless today, Yorkshire House, the home of Mrs. Katherine Fox Bowman near here, burned to the ground with an estimated loss of $50,000.

Although neighbors and firemen managed to save most of Mrs. Bowman's silver and some antique furniture from the first floor, a collection of relics and museum pieces, a $3,000 organ was saved and furniture upstairs was lost. Fanned by wind, the blaze leveled the 25-room house in an hour. Smoke and falling timbers blocked access to upper floors.

Mrs. Bowman, chairman of the Fauquier Chapter of the Red Cross, was at luncheon when the fire started. Originating from sparks falling on the roof, the fire spread rapidly before a neighbor noticed it and phoned Warrenton.

Yorkshire House was built 18 years ago by the Bowmans. Most of the loss was covered by insurance, Mrs. Bowman said.

D. C. Study Extended To Include Mentally Ill

Federal Expert Is Named With Assurance of Complete Report.

Chief at St. Elizabeths Wins as Critic of Lunacy Laws.

Dr. J. W. Wilson, a senior surgeon in the United States Health Service with many years of experience in caring for the mentally ill, will direct the mental hygiene phase of the District public health survey now under way.

Asst. Surg. Gen. Robert Olesen announced the appointment yesterday. Brought from New York for the special study, Dr. Wilson probably will start work today.

"We want a good, complete report on this subject and with Dr. Wilson in charge one may be expected," said Dr. Olesen, supervisor of the investigation of the Capital's public health establishment.

Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, was elated at news of the appointment. It was his address last Tuesday before the Council of Social Agencies health committee, when he criticized District lunacy laws, which led to inclusion of mental hygiene in the survey.

The Public Health Service expert formerly was chief medical officer of Lewisburg (Pa.) Penitentiary, one of the newest and largest Federal prisons.

Assurance that the manner in which the District government looks after prospective mothers, the newborn and pre-school children less than 5 years of age was given yesterday when the Children's Bureau disclosed the part it will play.

Under direction of Dr. Ethel C. Dunham, director of the division of research in child development, the study will cover all existing facilities—the Health Department, municipal and private hospitals and volunteer agencies. It will check thoroughly pre-natal clinics, child hygiene stations, obstetrical services, nursing, social service and all other pertinent matters.

Dr. Marian Crane will direct medical field work, Dr. Dunham asserted. The nursing study will be in charge of Miss Naomi Deutsch and Miss Edith Baker will conduct the medical social service investigation. Dr. Robert J. Myers, the bureau's chief statistician' also will assist in the study which, said Dr. Dunham, will take from four to six weeks.

Woman Killed Crossing Street Is 98th Victim

A woman whose last name was the same as that of the next preceding traffic fatality last night became the city's ninety-eighth auto death by stepping in front of an automobile at Thirteenth and T streets northwest.

She was Nellie King, 70, of 1203 Rhode Island avenue northwest. She died in Garfield Hospital a short time after the accident in which she sustained fractures of an arm, ribs and skull.

The year's ninety-seventh traffic fatality was Edward J. King, 75, of 3412 Tenth street northeast, who died to save his blind wife by shoving her out of the path of an auto on Tenth near Monroe street northeast Sunday night.

Police said driver of the car that struck the woman was John M. Cherry, jr., 28, of 6000 Thirteenth street northwest.

The falality total at this time last year was 94.

Miss Leone K. Meyers, 33, 338 Fairmont street northwest stepped unhurt last night from her battered coupe, after it turned over twice following collision with a fire truck at Fifth and Sheridan streets northwest.

The truck, driven by Pvt. H. O. Ware, was going east on Sheridan street to answer an alarm at Second and Sheridan when the accident occurred. Ware said the truck hit the rear end of Miss Meyer's light car, southbound on Fifth street.

Firemen learned afterward the call they were answering was a false alarm, their second for the evening.

D. C. Traffic Heads To Attend 'Clinic'

William A. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic, and Inspector William E. Holmes, of the Metropolitan Police Department, will be first "witnesses" at the informal "traffic clinic" Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, will open today at his office.

It probably will be a one-man investigation, as it has not been authorized by the committee. Schulte, however, has invited other members of the committee to be present when the hearing opens at 10:30 a. m.

Algic Sailors Say They Acted To Save Lives

By Edward T. Folliard
A Staff Correspondent

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 14.—The 14 sailors of the S. S. Algic, charged with a conspiracy to revolt against their captain in the harbor of Montevideo, Uruguay, began telling their stories in Federal court here today.

Walter Rees, 23-year-old able seaman, and six of his shipmates gave testimony indicating that the defense would justify the crew's action on the ground that their lives were imperiled by the presence aboard of "scab" stevedores.

Claim "Scabs" Incompetent.

Rees said that he and other members of the crew called a union meeting and voted to withhold steam from the deck winches for two reasons:

1. The scab stevedores, who were trying to load the ship, were obviously incompetent and therefore in their handling of the cargo were a "danger" to the lives of the crew.

2. Union stevedores (or, at least, native Uruguayans Reese took to be union stevedores) were circling the Algic in small launches, shouting threats in Spanish and waving their fists at the strikebreakers.

"We did not think it would be healthy for us ashore if we worked with the scabs," Reese said, and he explained how, after a union meeting aft, he and another sailor were delegated to tell Capt. Joseph A. Gainard that the crew would not work with the non-union stevedores and would not furnish steam for the winches.

Arrested as Deserter.

United States Attorney Bernard J. Flynn, in a vigorous cross-examination of Seaman Reese, brought out that he had been arrested as a deserter in Victoria, Brazil, after he and three shipmates "went over the side" and headed for shore in a native dugout. One of the four, Able Seaman H. B. Gill, was drowned. Victoria was the Algic's next port of call after Montevideo.

"Did you understand," Flynn asked, "when you signed the ship's articles in Baltimore that you were bound to obey all lawful orders of the captain and his officers?"

"Yes, sir."

"Were you in sympathy with the action taken by the crew in Montevideo?"

"I was."

"Do you mean to tell the jury that you didn't feel that you were committing an offense?"

"No."

"Why, then, did you try to desert the ship at Victoria?"

"I didn't attempt to desert."

Prosecutor Flynn then produced a statement signed by Reese in the Victoria police station, a statement in which Reese said specifically that he intended to desert. Reese admitted signing the statement, but said he did so only because he was afraid that if he didn't Capt. Gainard would sail away and leave him in Victoria.

Under further cross-examination, Reese admitted that shore leave was forbidden at Victoria; that he and the other three slid down a hawser to a coffee lighter alongside; that they then piled into the native dugout and that this capsized after they had gone about 15 feet.

Vice Consul Testifies.

The Government closed its case after the appearance on the stand of Hector C. Adam, jr., American Vice Consul at Montevideo. A young man, now serving his third year in the consular service, Adam told how he was summoned to the Algic by a clerk working in the office of the American Republics Line, which operates the 8,000-ton freighter for the Government.

He said he could see that the ship "was out of control" as soon as he went aboard.

"What do you mean by out of control?" he was asked.

"There were no sailors in evidence," he replied, "and stevedores were lining the rails and doing no work."

Before Vice Consul Adam went on to tell how he addressed the crew, Judge W. Calvin Chestnut instructed him not to dwell on the "patriotic appeals" he made. Adam said he talked to the crew for an hour, stressing three points:

1. That the stevedore strike was not a legal one, but merely concerned a feud between a foreman and some of the men.

2. That regardless of the strike's legality, the Algic crew had no right in maritime law to support such a strike.

3. That their conduct was "damaging to American prestige."

Attorneys for the 14 sailors asked that Judge Chesnut order Adam's remarks about the illegality of their conduct be stricken from the record.

"That is the very question at issue here," said Defense Counsel Wildred McQuaid.

Judge Chesnut, however, allowed the remark to stay in, and said that he would tell the jury later whether Adam's conception of the law agreed with his own.

Refused to Permit Inquiry.

Vice Consul Adam said that after he addressed the crew he went forward and waited with the officers to learn whether the crew would vote to obey orders. He said it was a "humiliating position." Thereafter, he said, Reese and a Spanish-speaking member of the crew, Caesar Cortez, asked permission to go ashore and "investigate" the stevedores' strike.

"I refused," Adam said, "because it might injure friendly relations between the United States and Uruguay. I refused as a matter of policy."

When the crew refused to alter its stand, Adam said, he went ashore with Capt. Gainard. The latter telephoned Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy of the Maritime Commission, in Washington, and received his "place them in irons" order. Then, Adam said, they returned to the Algic.

"I told the men they were an unruly crew," he said, "and I called the roll. I asked each man this question: 'Will you now obey all lawful orders of the captain and his mates?' Each answered, 'yes.'"

Sailors Describe "Protest."

Rees, first defense witness, was followed on the stand by David Tuttle, ordinary seamon; William A. Raymond, able seaman; Roderick Campbell, able seaman; William J. Cassidy, a wiper; John H. Croghan, a fireman, and William O. Forrest, an able seaman.

The crew members testified that in voting not to work with the scab stevedores and in voting not to furnish steam for the deck winches, they were merely making a "protest" to Capt. Gainard. They said they had no intention of robbing Gainard of his authority as master, and insisted they performed their routine duties.

Henry A. Schweinhaut, special assistant to the Attorney General, who is aiding the Baltimore prosecutors, brought out statements which, he said, the crew members had given to investigators of the Maritime Commission when the Algic stopped at Jacksonville on the homeward trip, and also statements they gave agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation after the ship docked at Baltimore.

William O. Standard, C. I. O. attorney, from New York, one of three defense counsel, asked Judge Chesnut to order out al Itestimony revolving around earlier statements, arguing that they were obtained from the men "under duress."

Judge Chesnut withheld a ruling on this motion until tomorrow.

Landing Upright Only Tough Job in This Sport

Comin' round the mountain, Ski-Jumper Marshall Perrow, of Tacoma, Wash., steers his swift way to a happy landing on the snow-covered slopes of Paradise Valley on Mount Rainier. Going over a cornice of ice and snow is as easy as it looks, explains Perrow; the hard part is landing on your feet. After that it's easy to glide safely downward without any injurious sprawl.

500 Geologists Will Watch What Goes on at Earth's Core

Five hundred visiting geologists will have the unusual opportunity of seeing what goes on at the center of the earth as part of the American Geographical Society's 50th meeting here December 28-30. Carnegie Institution's geophysical laboratory at 2801 Upton street northwest will hold open house the third day of the conference.

Wonders that will be on view at the laboratory include the melting of rock under a pressure of 200,000 pounds per square inch. In this way the scientists can learn what happens to rocks subjected to terrific pressure at the center of the earth.

The geologists will be able to look through miscroscopes at minerals which have been found around hot springs and geysers and to study chemical analyses of gases given off by active volcanoes. They themselves know all about copper, gold and other metals, but the geophysicist can tell them a thing or two about how such minerals work their way from the center of the earth to the surface.

So much energy is needed for these and other of the laboratory's projects that someone once said the addition of one worker to the staff means an increase of $500 in the institution's monthly electricity bill.

Rescued Tree Earns Fortune As Film 'Star'

Resourceful Hollywoodite Devises Arborial Mint; Chinese Dyspepsia.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Dec. 14.—When Joyce Kilmer wrote the poem about trees and how mere men can't make 'em, he probably didn't know about Dan J. Mauerhan.

He nearly made a tree—at least he made one over—and to date it's earned him more than $10,000, acting in the movies.

Eight years ago, Mauerhan said today, building inspectors condemned an old pepper tree, 40 feet high. He chopped down this tree, carted it away, embalmed it, and started renting it to the film producers.

It appeared in more than 30 pictures, as an elm, a chestnut, and whatnot. At the moment it is acting as an oak on a soundstage of the Hal Roach Studios, where "Merrily We Live" is in production. All its original leaves long ago have disappeared. Mauerhan has cemented real oak leaves to its branches and camouflaged its trunk with plaster and paint. Roach is paying him $500 for the right to photograph it.

Mauerhan's business sprang from the fact that many a scenario calls for love scenes to be enacted under a giant tree. These scenes have to be made indoors and an ordinary tree won't do. When chopped down and planted on a hardwood floor, it begins immediately to look droopy. Mauerhan's tree retains its freshness indefinitely—thanks to its varnished leaves and strongly bolted limbs. That's why it's earned him so much money.

Oriental Indigestion.

"Have a drink of inkompay," said Keye Luke last night, pouring into a cocktail glass a potion of yellow liquid, which looked like shellac and—we regret to report—tasted worse.

We asked him how the Chinese spelled "inkompay," and Luke, the Chinese dectective of the Charley Chan pictures, replied:

"NG—is pronounced inkompay."

The scene of this research into the science of oriental philology was the Soochow Cafe, in the heart of Los Angeles' Chinatown, where Luke was introducing us to the mysteries of celestial banqueting.

A couple of swigs of NG started the proceedings, whereupon we had jasmine tea, rice cakes and tangerine duck.

Luke had ordered the latter a couple of days in advance, because it takes a long time to remove the bones from a duck and replace them with tangerine skins, chestnuts and mushrooms.

Then we had fried shrimp and seaweed soup and vegetable goulash, which contained celery, water chestnuts, onions and green peas, still in their pods.

Eat, Drink and Be Wary.

We washed this down with some more NG and started on some fried rice, some boiled rice, some sliced pork, and a stew of chestnuts, peanuts and a couple of other things.

The next course consisted of pineapple, mixed with bean sprouts, then came preserved tangerines and sugared ginger cakes with seeds on 'em and word from Luke that he'd give us a real Chinese banquet some time. (All we could do was try another dipper of NG.)

Young Luke, born near Canton, China, educated in Seattle, Wash., and speaking English far better than most Americans, used to be a cartoonist in a movie publicity department. Somebody wanted a Chinese actor, couldn't find one, and turned to Luke. He did fine, and has been acting ever since.

He plays the part of the dumb young son of Charlie (Warner Oland) Chan. He's been doing it so long that he calls Oland "Pop."

Feudal Moat-Draw Is Ranch Barrier

Hollywood actors who sought to "get away from it all by living on ranches in the San Fernando Valley are having their troubles.

Warren William is among the first to be forced to take protective measures. To keep curious folk from invading his property, the actor has been forced to build a "draw barrier" for his back gate like a medieval castle.

Tourists have been driving down a side road to his ranch and would either suddenly appear in his back yard or in turning aroun take a section of his fence down. On a day off from work on "Arsene Lupin Returns," the actor constructed a barrier out of huge timbers that can be operated by a secret lever. Curious drivers see the barrier and decide against driving into the property.

Paint Bath Causes 4-Hour Wash Job

Kay Linaker has an excellent excuse for being late on the "Charlie Chan at Monte Carlo" set, but hereafter she promises to let contractors have their profits. When one placed too high an estimate on building a cupboard for her new home the former New York stage actress built one herself for $9 instead of the $75 he asked.

All went well until she accidentally tipped a can of stain over her own head before leaving for her afternoon studio call—and it took the hairdresser four hours to remove the sticky substance from her hair.

Ameche Revealed A Cicero Student

Don Ameche, Twentieth Century-Fox actor who co-stars with Sonja Henie in "Happy Ending," is an indefatigible student of Cicero and has been since his pre-college days. According to the Rev. Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, of the Catholic University of Washington, D. C., Ameche rated as a star in Latin when attending Columbia College, during the period of Dr. Sheehy's professorship there. At that time, he says, it was fully expected that Ameche would become an authority on Cicero.

Hit Remade.

Zane Grey's "Born to the West," which scored a hit as a picture in 1926, with Jack Holt starred, has been made again by Paramount. John Wayne, John Mack Brown and Marsha Hunt have the featured roles.

Not All Juvenile Artistes Become Overnight Stars, As the Dancing Miss Mitzi Mayfair Can Tell You!

Capitol Headliner Achieved Present Eminence by Turning Down Early Contracts; Cliff Battles and Charlie Malone Booked; Tidings of "Spring Thaw;" Goldwyn Explains; Toy Matinees; Notes.

BELL.

Mitzi has taken the hard way to her present eminence. Instead of scribbling her name on every contract proffered her since her introduction to the stage at the age of 12—which would have established her as one of the cinema's "overnight" Cinderella girls when still a mere child—she and her manager-mother had the good judgment to decline to be stampeded and did their own picking and choosing. Not many have had so much courage.

Born Emlyn Pique, the nimble Miss Mayfair "crashed" New York when 12 years old and reached a minor place in one of the old Publix touring stage units, with a Broadway benefit performance as a springboard. She appeared at the New York Paramount Theater with Paul Ash and Helen "Poo-Poo-Pah-Doop" Kane and then toured to the West Coast. There she appeared in a "Music Box Revue," with Harry Carroll, and successively danced in "Paramount on Parade," "Hold Everything," "Manhattan Serenade" and "No, No, Nanette." On the strength of these appearances, although only a kid, she was offered one of those trick, 7-year contracts, all cluttered up with options, whereases and as-hereinafter-stateds—and promptly turned it down in favor of a broader stage experience.

By the time she was 14 she was receiving offers from some of the foremost of Broadway's musical comedy and revue producers. She looked these over pretty carefully, too—probably over her mother's shoulder—and by the exercise of conspicuous discretion has had the good fortune, since, to appear in such stage hits as the Ziegfeld "Follies," "The Show Is On," "Calling All Stars," "Music Box Revue," "Take a Chance" and "At Home Abroad."

It has taken a little longer, but the prevailing judgment in shaping this brilliant career obviously has been sound. Mitzi Mayfair now is established in the first flight of young American dancers, with a style that is unique and a versatility that seems limitless since she has gone in for ballet and perfected taps in addition to her original semiacrobatic routines.

Mitzi is as charming and gracious offstage as she is agile and ebullient on. Years ago she took her place, along with Ruth Etting, among the small group of artistes who express their appreciation of favorable notices by letter or wire almost before the ink is dry on the newspaper page.

But there is a spunky side to the child's nature, too. I recall a certain night, after an opening at the National, when Mitzi was all for walking out and letting the whole business go hang because she felt some more or less justifiable dissatisfaction with the numbers allotted her. This feeble voice was raised, together with several others, against any such precipitated action. By the next day she had cooled off a bit and went to New York to score a smashing hit—with some new numbers.

Only 21 now, Mitzi ought to be around a long time yet. I hope she is and that Washington never is canceled off her route. The theater could do with a few more like her.

Speaking of the Capitol, the Loew executives have more or less kicked goal after touchdown and scored that extra point. Beginning Friday, there will be presented as a special added attraction on the Capitol stage the first local appearance of Cliff Battles and Charlie Malone, of the triumphant Washington Redskins, as an "act." They will be teamed with Tony Wakeman, the well-known microphone sports announcer, who has radioed all the games in which they have played with Mr. George "God's Gift to Linen" Marshall's professional gridiron champs this season. Incidentally, the towering Messrs. Battles and Malone practically "stole the show" a week ago last Monday night out at Prof. Joe Turner's cauliflower plant, when they were introduced from the audience on the "champions' night" of box-fighting. They finally had to climb up in the ring and take some more bows before the crowd would let the noggin-knocking proceed. If they repeat at the Capitol, the roof of the place is apt to blow off!

So who should stop by the desk but Nat Dorfman, cymbal-whanger-in-chief for the Max Gordon enterprises, come to town for a minute to spread hopeful tidings of Clare Kummer's new comedy, "Spring Thaw," in which Roland Young will be seen for the first time on any stage in the National Theater the week of Monday, December 27.

The erudite and literate Mr. Dorfman reports that the script reads like a typical Kummer-Young hit, perhaps even a little better than "Her Master's Voice." That will be plenty good enough.

It might bear repeating that Miss Kummer and Mr. Young understand each others' methods and purposes perfectly, she being the star's mother-in-law—but not in the comic supplement sense.

Not to be outdone by the other downtown theater specializing in canned gelatin, Sidney B. Lust announces that special reels of the Redskins-Chicago Bears championship game are being run as added attractions at his Leader and Hippodrome theaters in Washington, at the Arcade, in Hyattsville, and the Cameo, in Mount Rainier, throughout the remainder of the current week. Mr. Lust's Maryland theaters, by the way, are holding their Christmas toy performances Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. This also would mean the Arcade and Cameo, mentioned a few lines back. Admission will be one toy—or as many more as the patron may choose to give. To be added is the Milo Theater, in Rockville, where the event is being sponsored by the Welfare Board of Montgomery County and the Rockville Sentinel.

To clarify his connection with United Artists, because of any misapprehension arising out of the decision not to exercise the option for the purchase of United Artists, Samuel Goldwyn has issued the following additional statement:

"United Artists is a distributing corporation. My only relationship with United Artists is that I own one-fifth of this corporation and am distributing my pictures through United Artists at the present time.

"United Artists does not own any part of my Samuel Goldwyn Productions. I am sole owner of my production company, and have been for the past 15 years during which I have produced pictures independently."

So there it is, if that is what you have been worrying about.

In passing, it might be mentioned that Goldwyn's production of "The Hurricane," with Jon Hall and Dorothy Lamour in the stellar roles, yesterday began its sixth capacity week at the Astor Theater, New York, as a two-day attraction. In course of time, it is hoped that this picturization of the Charles Nordhoff-James Norman Hall book will find its way to the Capital.

So tonight the Washington Civic Theater will open its engagement in Andre Obey's play of "Noah" at the Wardman Park Theater and run it through Saturday. This work never before has been produced in Washington. The elephant to be seen in "Noah" is the handiwork of an expert elephant-maker, who once received a silver loving cup from the White House for her proficiency in this respect—Margery Rice, who captured first prize with her Jumbo at one of the "Gridiron Widows" parties. One of the advantages of this pachyderm is that you don't have to stuff it with peanuts.

On Pre-Christmas Theater Bills

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Dec. 14.—Idol Chatter: It is easier to drive a camel through the eye of anecdle than to crash the upper stratum of Filmtown society without owning a yacht. No danger of Hollywood's fortune tellers going on the dole while Anita Louise has the price of a reading. Best off-screen comedy of the week; Stuttering Roscoe Ates' impression of an excitable radio announcer broadcasting a football game. There is an entertainer in a Tia Juana cabaret who looks enough like Mary Maguire to be her identical twin.

ANITA LOUISE.

Seeing an actor in technicolor make-up, I always wonder whether he has a hang-over or I am having a nightmare. Today's "oh-yeah" item from the publicity barrage: "Barton MacLane was a champion weight lifter before entering pictures—he can still lift 300 pounds with one hand." Loretta Young's trick of gazing intently into the eyes of every male interviewer invariably leaves the lads in a rosy haze. It is hard to believe: That Billie Burke, looking younger than many an ingenue, has a daughter old enough to vote. Hollywood's real life Rube Goldberg is Hugh Herbert, the inventor of countless nonsensical gadgets that never work.

• • • •

Things that amaze me: The number of enemies that Frances Farmer has succeeded in making in one short year. The three most beautiful girls on the Twentieth Century lot are waitresses in the studio cafe. All publicity aside; Evelyn Knapp reel-y is an expert deep-sea angler. Speaking of fish, I always think of Nelson Eddy's hand shake.

• • • •

In the ante-room of the Twentieth Century studios are lifesize photographs af the company's stars. As I enter the studio one morning, I met Brian Donelvy and we paused in the ante-room to swap gossip. Suddenly, in the middle of a sentence, his voice caught ond his face went blank. He made an heroic effort to cover up, saw that I had noticed the slip, and then pointed to the wall. Where his picture has hung ever since his rise to stardom, was a blank space. "My option falls due today," he said. "I guess they have caught up with me. Bound to happen sooner or later." We started through the inner door and as we passed, the girl at the desk said good morning, then added: "They took your picture down this morning, Mr. Donlevy—an artist is copying it; it's going to be reproduced in one of the magazines." I have never heard a man say "thank you" with more feeling than Brian.

Now that Freddie Bartholomew has returned to the Metro fold, it only remains for him to pay the piper. The lawyers retained by his aunt in her fight for more salary have agreed to be reasonable. They are perfectly willing to cut their fees to $25,000. The studio has agreed to pay $10,000—the balance to be paid out of Freddie's earnings. Court records show that the various lawsuits prosecuted for Freddie's custody by his aunt and parents cost him another $75,000. Ninety thousand in less than two years! His Aunt Millicent's passionate protest that Freddie is cruelly underpaid would be funny—if it were not so tragic.

The other day Carole Lombard gave a party, to which she invited 15 guests. Of course the studio publicity lads heard about it, and, in logical sequence, newspapers and fan magazines. A crowd descended on the Lombard mansion—and Carole burned. After the last guest had departed, she dictated a letter—"Carole Lombard entertained 15 friends at a quiet party this afternoon. Refreshments were provided for the guests—and devoured by three gossip writers and eight protographers."

"Send that," she ordered, "to all the editors and see if they can take a suitable hint."

Crawford, Temple Swap Autographs

Sidelight on the private lives of two stars:

"Dear Miss Crawford: I would like to have a picture of you, too. Love, Shirley Temple."

Joan waited until she had completed a new portrait sitting, then selected her favorite, which she inscribed:

Tone Hailed Ace In Shirt Supply

Hollywood tailors say that Franchot Tone possesses the most complete "shirt wardrobe" in Hollywood.

The actor has just completed his collection by ordering several plaid flannel shirts for sports wear. Franchot admits he always did have a a cowboy complex.

Comedian Buys Beach Cottage

Frank Jenks has decided that life is too short to struggle with architects, blueprints and contractors, so he has taken the easy way out by buying a ready made home at Redondo Beach, Calif.

Equally in love with seashore, mountains and desert, the comedian spent five months looking over sites before he made his final decision shortly after he finished his role in the Alice Faye picture, "You're a Sweetheart."

"I'd have gone to Palm Springs," said Jenks, "but the real estate man refused to guarantee an ocean frontage. Then he tried to sell me a mountain top. I could see the ocean from it, but it was too far to jump and I hate to spend my life climbing up and down. Anyway, who wants to raise goats? So I compromised by buying a home at Redondo Beach."

He plans a Christmas housewarming.

Mass Production.

A Paramount camera unit, under Richard Talmadge, brought back 75,000 feet of film from a three-month location in Alaska for "Spawn of the North." This footage, only about 2,000 feet of which will get into the picture, covers merely background and spectacle material.

This 'Help China' affair therefore resulted in aid to a Japanese artist" . . . "Whenever a gal phones Tommy Manville," a detective whispers at Tony's, "her conversation is transcribed on a record."

Star and Hubby Won't Lack Game

Grace Bradley and her husband, William Boyd, signed a five-year lease for a mountain desert estate today and will indulge in the pastime of raising trout, bullfrogs, goats, chickens, cows, walnuts and apples.

The estate was found by the couple when Miss Bradley visited Boyd on location near Lone Pine when she had a couple of days off from work on "The Big Broadcast of 1938." Boyd is making another "Hop Along, Cassidy" Western there.

The estate, leased from the Metropolitan Water District, consists of 160 acres, fed by 16 natural springs. There is a natural swimming pool at one spot. Immediately below the swimming pool is another large pool where trout will be raised. The bullfrogs will be raised in two reservoirs on the property, on which there are countless apple and walnut trees. They plan to stock the property immediately.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Dec. 14.

HAVE YOU heard that enormous dither in the East, right at the edge of the Atlantic Ocean? It wasn't an enemy fleet at all. It was caused by the first of our three Junior Assemblies, at which the very top of our annual debutante crop is presented publicly, and at some cost, to what is laughingly called "Society."

These things are not to be taken lightly, and they aren't. You and I, I hope, being people, may steal a small, rapid snicker over such empty didoes, but to those involved they are portentous, indeed. Why? Well, in the first place, about 400 New York young ladies are hurled bodily into the arena, but no more than 125 are invited to display themselves and their new frocks at the three "assemblies, which were thought up at the turn of the century by the late Mrs. Arthur Murray Dodge, and are now superintended by Mrs. Richard C. Colt, whomest of the whom.

Formal? My dear! Just because pappy has millions is no guarantee of entree. He must also have very azure blood oozing about his hardening arteries. We don't want any mere heiresses, thank you. We want daughters of daughters, if you grasp it. Yet the actual price is modest, as befits matters involving blood and not doubloons. For $85, cash, the chosen deb may come, accompanied by poor harassed mama, and two chosen beaux. She usually wears her coming-out frock, the result of a girlish dream, a smart designer and a flock of thimble artists.

These heavily crusted orgies are planned as much as a year in advance, and are governed by rules of dress as well as impeccable conduct. Let no stag, overcome by glamor and bubbly, fall into a rented palm! The deb herself is pushed into long white kid gloves, and her white-tied boy friends should wear white gloves, too, if he really wants to count. Oh, I'll tell you, New York's three Junior Assemblies are something! Just what—I'll let you imagine!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—For many years one of the funniest women on the American stage was Helen Broderick, whose talents have been pretty badly used lately by Hollywood. Now another case of second generation of trouper-blood appears, to our great delight. Her 6-foot son, Broderick Crawford, is giving a magnificent performance as Lennie in the new smash hit, "Of Mice and Men," the current subject of theater talk here. Any of you old enough to remember the great vaudeville team of Broderick and Crawford? Well, young Crawford is its most enduring result! . . . Incidentally, lobby talk has this brutal, crisp, thrilling play as the annual award winner of the local Dramatic Critics' Circle.

• • • •

Now that skating is the sport of the local winter—and you should just see the high type of girl who has chosen to get her lumps in this fashion now!—skating costumes are costumes are filling the eye and emptying the pocketbook! The most popular material, right now, is velveteen—sometimes in a nice one-piece frock whose circular skirt has an adjustable hem. Wide on the ice, but narrowed when just walking. Now that seems to be a fine idea to me. We walk, too.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

United Pressure of Vanity and Fashion Forces Control of Figure.

By Ida Jean Kain.

Just Two things stand between you and the middle-aged spread—vanity and midriff control.

Vanity, however, is, always a factor to be reckoned with, and particularly in the light of what the fashion designers are doing. Every time they snip away at a new piece of material they appeal to you to keep your waistline slim, your diaphragm flat, and your tummy in the background.

No Supporting Bones.

If you could see your bones in the althogether, you would appreciate how easily it is for waistline and tummy to acquire the loose, settled look of middle-aged expansion. From the crest of one hip to the other tthere is no bony structure to hold the form, and midriff control is up to your muscles.

The following sample exercise will benefit you.

POSITION: Leaning face down on the floor, weight resting on palms of hands and toes. Have the body in a straight line, knees and elbows straight.

"Walk" Up to Hands.

MOVEMENT: Keeping the knees stiff, "walk" up to the hands, shifting the weight from palms to fingers, then walk back until you are again in the starting position. Knees must be held stiff throughout the exercise, and the back should be arched high as you walk toward the hands. The lower abdominal wall must be held up and in. Rest between walks, and perform six, later increasing to twelve times.

No mater how faithfully you exercise you cannot make midriff appear slim unless your posture is what it should be.

Ski Clothes Are Colorful on Snowy Backgrounds

Made of Water-Repellant Fabrics, They Are Immune to Icy Tumbles.

By Ethel Ehlen

The Post Fashion Editor.

SKI CLOTHES this winter are simple of line, gay in color and unique as to material. Conferring with ski experts, designers have developed more practical costumes; they are now as wearable as they are good looking. Colors which lend themselves well to striking accessories, such as ice blue, navy, golden browns, pine green and the like, are not only considered smart but are ideal contrasts with the snowy backgrounds. Accents for these color tones, popular in the ski world of fashion, are fireman red, bright yellow, brilliant blues, Kelly green, and white dramatized with gay colors.

The regulation costume for winter 1938 consists of ski pants with jackets of varying lengths, mittens matching the jacket or cap, and your own choice of head covering. Some of the jackets flaunt the new high pockets, tiny collars and novelty buttons down the front; others have zipper closings, huge patch pockets and hooded collars. Both the pants and jackets have been chemically treated so as to be water-repellent—hence, you can take numerous tumbles and the snow and ice will have no marring effects on your ski suit.

Satin is being used for winter sports outfits for the first time this winter, particularly for softly tailored ski jackets. Soft woolens in tweedy mixtures, parka cloth, gabardine, the regulation ski cloth are leading ski fabrics. Both jacket and pants may be of the same material, but a contrast in fabric as well as color is usually more effective.

This modern Red Riding Hood suit for the twentieth century ski wardrobe is lavishly trimmed with long-haired fur. Jacket is of navy parka cloth (also available in scarlet and beige). The pants are heavy wool in pine green.

A clever new ski jacket of white satin, shown above, is worn with bright red ski pants—the type that Johanne Kolstead, of Norway, is wearing this season. An outfit designed not only for comfort but also beauty.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should Girl, "Knowing Marriage Is Normal Life," Wed Man She Doesn't Love to Solve Frustrations?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Should a girl, advancing in years, marry a man who is perfect in every respect but whom she doesn't love, in order to solve her emotional and social frustration? Is love essential to happy marriage? Or is the acquisition of a home, security, children, and the sexual and social life associated with marriage more important to the well-being of the individual?

• • • •

My questions are prompted because I am in love with a man who is not in love with me. We have been friends for five years. Two years ago, foolishly and impulsively, I confessed my love for him. In consequence, I learned he was not in love with me but wished to remain friends—which we are to this day. I have found it very hard to act the part of a friend, though. I still love him and can't bring myself to break off. He supplies all my intellectual, mental and spiritual deficiences. I suppose it is these very deficiences which account for his not loving me; for he is not in love with anyone else, that I know of. Then, too, his career doesn't begin until next year.

• • • •

Now, another man has become interested in me and would, with some encouragement, become seriously interested, I believe. To date, however, I have not given him any encouragement. I know that marriage is the normal life. Yet should I encourage this man, knowing full well I do not love him? And if he proposed marriage, should I accept, for the sake of securing a normal life for myself? Or should I hang on to the old love, hoping that eventually he may learn to love me? Or should I drop both and look for reciprocal love further along the path of life? I shall appreciate any advice you can give me. Sincerely, WAITING.

• • • •

Importance of Love.

DEAR WAITING: If a girl's only reason for marrying a man she did not love was to work out certain social and emotional problems of her own; in other words, if, in making the marriage, she was thinking only in terms of what it could do for, or might make possible for her, then I think she would very likely find her marriage as sterile as her maidenhood, so far as the fruits of happiness and self-development were concerned.

• • • •

One kind of love is indispensible to happy marriage. Pulse-pounding infatuation is not always necessary. Neither is the ecstatic conviction that the beloved is the personification in human flesh of the lover's adolescent image of the ideal man or the ideal woman. So many people, yourself included, no doubt, think that anything less than these dizzying states of emotion are not to be classified as love. Yet there is another kind, a peaceful, wholesome, serviceable kind of love, which works very well in the everyday lives of everyday people. And it is the kind of love into which the other two kinds must eventually be transmuted, if they are to stand the lifelong wear and tear of enduring marriage. This love, which I have said is indispensable to happy marriage is based on fundamental compatibility of temperament and viewpoint. It is, in essence, spiritual friendship. Its outward aspect is loving-kindness.

• • • •

The psychic health of the individual (which is what a genuine sense of well being stems from) is not always guaranteed by "the acquisition of a home, (financial) security, children and the sexual and social life associated with marriage." Sturdy spiritual serenity, with its concomitants of normal physical health and vital personality, is built, stone by stone, only through richly contributive living, of a kind which consistently and satisfyingly exercises in positive ways one's mental, spiritual and physical energies. In a word, one has to work if one would find happiness. And, as I see it, you are passively waiting for some man to come along and provide an amply and comfortably furnished niche in life into which you can move and sit down with folded hands, figuratively speaking. As a matter of fact, most of your present unhappiness is due to just such stale inactivity.

• • • •

The first step in the solution of your problem is to break off the dead-end association with the man who doesn't love you, yet tacitly encourages you in wasting your young womanhood upon him. This must be done in order to clear ground, as it were, for the planting of new seeds of friendship. Your next step is to give the "perfect man" full opportunity for proving himself.

• • • •

It is silly, if not stupid, to conclude obstinately that because you do not love him today that you might not learn to love him tomorrow. That is on a par with deciding you don't care for a certain dish when you haven't tasted it; nor for a certain book when you haven't read it; nor for a certain country when you haven't visited it. Even if you never should love him, still you owe it to yourself to broaden your field of social contacts; to learn how to deal sympathetically and generously with those who are attracted to you. It is shockingly selfish to refuse friendship to a person of the opposite sex on the theory that one might not wish to marry that person. If you find you cannot love him, in the sense of feeling such a fine brand of affectionate friendship for him, and such gratitude for his love of you, that you would be willing to make every sacrifice for his happiness, don't marry him. But, on the other hand, don't say "no" to his proposal only because he doesn't measure up in every detail to your romantic dream of lover-like perfection. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

Heart Disease.

LAST MONTH'S issue of a national magazine contained an article entitled, "Death Comes to the Average Man." It dealt with heart disease, which, it was said, kills more people than cancer, tuberculosis, Bright's disease and pneumonia, put together.

In adult people its frequency is striking. Of 2,000 graduates of a great university, it was found that of every 1,000 deaths, 630 were due to heart disease or blood vessel disease. This checks closely with a study of 3,581 American physicians who died in 1936, and in these, 624 out of every 1,000 were heart deaths. Of course these figures look more alarming than they actually are.

In a group of that kind, definitely over the age of 30, infectious diseases are very uncommon. By and large, infectious diseases are diseases of children. Tuberculosis, which still takes a large toll, kills its victims usually under the age of 30. The high incidence of heart disease really means that people are being saved until they get into the heart disease period. Dr. Alfred E. Cohn has expressed that idea by saying that the rise in the death rate for diseases of the cardio-vascular system is due not to malign but to beneficent causes.

The work of the heart is a beautifully adapted piece of mechanism. There are six and one-half quarts of blood in the body. The heart, as a hollow muscle, has to pump this all over, bringing food and oxygen to all the billions of cells in the body. It works tirelessly and endlessly, and the amount of work that it does has been calculated to be equal to raising a man of average weight in an elevator four yards every 10 minutes.

The heart beat itself is controlled largely by the nature of the heart muscle, although certain extrinsic controls are brought into play occasionally. There are nerves which slow the heart or make it go more rapidly, but in general it makes its own pace. This pace is determined by different factors. At rest, of course, the rate is slower than when exertion makes a demand for more oxygen, which must be pumped from the lungs to the tissues.

Delicate as all these adjustments are, the heart is a pretty tough character and stands up against a good deal of racket. If more work is demanded of it, it enlarges, just as any muscle does when more work is given it to do.

The two things that cause most heart disease are, first, the thickening of the arteries that goes with old age. This gradual change affects the heart in two ways. In the first place, its own arteries become smaller, and hence the heart muscle gets less nutrition and, second, the rise in blood pressure which accompanies hardening of the arteries give it more work to do.

The second cause of heart disease is infection, which may light on the valves and lead to mechanical difficulties. Even with the valves injured, however, the heart may continue to beat well and efficiently for many years, sometimes as many as 50, and, indeed, many people with valvular heart disease live to old age and die of something else besides heart disease.

$10,000 Fur Coats Shown at Store

An interesting episode in Christmas shopping was the exclusive coat exhibition at the Hecht Co. last Monday. Highlighted like precious jewels were three coats by famous French designers. The one that probably attracted the most attention was an albino mink, said to be the only one of its kind in the world and valued at $10,000. Designed by Molyneux, it was made on straight lines with loose sleeves and a narrow, upstanding collar. Fashioned along lines noted for classic simplicity was a Vionnet model of Russian sable, also valued at $10,000. A dramatic full length evening coat made of white India broadtail had a wide border around the bottom of silver fox; the sleeves and shoulder line were given a smart broad effect by the use of intricate tucking. It was valued at $1,500.

Consideration Prime Need for A Queenly Aura

Marie's Secretary on U. S. Tour Gives Secrets of Regal Personality.

WITH feminine fashions getting more elegant every day, the problem of looking like a queen, grand duchess or even a countess becomes a pressing one. To that end some advice was sought on the queenly personality from a Washingtonian who has had an intimate glimpse as to how a queen and princess behave on a stage and off.

The woman is Adele Neville, who now conducts a shop on Connecticut avenue which promotes the works of Washington artists, as well as the sale of first-edition books, rare prints and etchings. Miss Neville was secretary to Queen Marie of Rumania during the latter's tour of the United States. An accomplished linguist, she was selected by the Queen on the recommendation of mutual friends to help in the royal visitor's tour of this country.

Consideration Vital.

"What makes a queenly personality?" Miss Neville was asked yesterday as she was discussing her experiences with royalty.

"First of all, consideration," she replied. "What particularly impressed me in dealing with the Queen, her son and daughter was their unfailing punctuality in meeting engagements. They adhered strictly to whatever schedule was planned. Nothing made them swerve from it."

Genuine graciousness is another element, Miss Neville believes, that makes for an aristocratic bearing. Graciousness, she maintains, must be sincere and spontaneous at all times. It cannot be assumed on occasions and shed at will when dealing with those in either superior or subordinate positions.

Motives Important.

"Motives," explained Miss Neville, "affect the making of a personality, in that they leave an indelible impression upon the charatcer of the individual. And in some way the real motives are transmitted to other people. Noble thoughts and motives develop a royal bearing, while base motives make one ordinary."

"If you would have a truly royal aura," added Miss Neville, "you must, of course, have good manners that are natural and spontaneous. Spontaneity comes from early training, constant practice and environment. Even among the royal families, where charming manners are the order of the day, nothing is left to chance, for they begin to train the children at a very early age. As a result, good manners are a part of the people rather than an affectation."

Roosevelts' Brilliant Cabinet Dinner Inaugurates Annual Official Social Season in Rare Splendor

Over 80 Distinguished Guests Enjoy Fine Musicale Later.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

An ornate gold service, belonging to the White House through many administrations, glittered against new crystal goblets bearing the Roosevelt crest as the Cabinet dinner last evening inaugurated the official social season for 1937-38.

For the next two months, while precedent charts the course and guides society's ship along, its accustomed routes, the Chief Executive and his wife will entertain at a series of functions characterized by formality and steeped in tradition. A seemingly endless train of top hats and tiaras, social and political celebrities, the great and the near-great, will sweep into the foyer and move down the red-carpeted corridor, as State dinners and receptions are chalked off the calendar one by one . . . and another colorful chapter in White House history draws to a close.

Last evening's dinner and the musicale afterward provided a brilliant beginning. By 8 o'clock, 80-odd guests had been escorted past the red-coated Marine Band by military and naval aides and were being received by the host and hostess. A few minutes later, they were seated—strictly according to rank—at the horseshoe-shaped table in the State dining room.

Gold and Crystal Used in Decorations

Massive gold candlesticks bearing tall tapers, gold epergnes filled with fruit—including enormous bunches of grapes falling over the sides—and a long mirrored plaque centering the table and bearing a huge bouquet of pink roses, stevia and maidenhair fern, formed the decorations. The Roosevelt china and goblets, sherry and sauterne glasses, gold spoons, forks and pearl-handled gold knives from other administrations were used, with the result that the entire layout was both beautiful and elaborate.

Following the dinner, additional guests arrived to enjoy the musicale in the East Room. The custom of providing entertainment following state dinners was established many years ago, but in recent years it has taken on new interest. President and Mrs. Roosevelt have always arranged for distinguished artists to appear at these affairs.

Three noted musicians provided the program last evening. Ruth Posselt, outstanding American violinist, who is scheduled to appear in Washington later this season; Richard Tauber, widely known tenor, and Arpad Sandor, one of the outstanding accompanists of modern times, gave a varied selection of numbers, to the delight of the large company.

Guests who enjoyed both the dinner and the musicale were the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Wooodring, the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S Cummings, the Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Farley, the Secretary of the Interior, Harold Ickes; the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Marvin H. McIntyre, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen T. Early, Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George Messersmith, the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Louis Johnson, the Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. William W. Howes, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles W. Edison.

Guest List Drawn Heavily From 'Who's Who'

The former Ambassador to Germany and Mrs. James W. Gerard were in the company, and were also overnight guests at the White House. Ronald Ransom, of the Federal Reserve Board, and Mrs. Ransom, and M. S. Szymezak, also of the Federal Reserve Board, were there. George T. Summerlin, the State Department's Chief of Protocol, was on hand; also Carroll Miller of the Interstate Commerce Commission and Mrs. Miller; W. A. Ayres of the Federal Trade Commission; Raymond B. Stevens of the U. S. Tariff Commission and Mrs. Stevens; Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Mrs. Jones; W. O. Douglas of the Securities and Exchange Commission and Mrs. Douglas, Miss Mary W. Dewson of the Social Security Board, and John D. Biggers, head of the unemployment census and Mrs. Biggers.

Others in the party included Roger Brett, Joseph V. Conolly, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Downe of Paris, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Flynn and Mrs. Louis M. Howe, who are house guests at the Executive Mansion; Arthur Krock, Mrs. Robert Livingston and Reginald Livingston, who are also overnight guests of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt; Mr. and Mrs. Lenox R. Lohr, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, Henry Osthagen, Mr. and Mrs. William Steinway, Mr. and Mrs. William G. Symmes, Milo Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Walker, the Rev. and Mrs. Howard S. Wilkinson, Miss Mary Wollner, house guest at the White House; Miss Marguerite LeHand, Mrs. Malvina T. Scheider, Mrs. James M. Helm and Capt. and Mrs. Walter B. Woodson.

Underwood & Underwood.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

SITTING THROUGH a dinner party without saying a word is generally considered the greatest of all social crimes, yet there are some occasions when such a silence, on the part of the women guests anyway, is genuinely golden. An example of this was a dinner given recently for Roy Roberts, managing editor of the Kansas City Star, who came to Washington for the Gridiron dinner and was widely entertained during his stay.

DUDLEY HARMON.

At this particular dinner an interesting political combination had gathered to meet the man who took so prominent a part in nominating Landon for the Presidency. There were Jouett Shouse, president of the Liberty League; Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democratic leader in the defeat of the President's bill for judiciary reform, and Representative James Wadsworth, former Senator and dyed-in-the-wool Republican. Naturally, in the presence of such luminaries, the women were only too anxious for the men to do all the talking, and converse they did on politics behind the scenes. Unfortunately, everything said was off the record, but no doubt will be told some day in somebody's memoirs.

• • • •

MR. ROBERTS is an interesting man. He started life as a reporter in Kansas City and did such brilliant work that he was sent to Washington. Here he served as president of the Gridiron Club during the Hoover-Curtis regime before being called back to Kansas City to act as managing editor of the Star.

In addition to his writing, Mr. Roberts has two hobbies: politics and food. While not exactly a slender man, he has the energy of ten; gets around, meets new people all the time, and has irons in many a fire. Now, a little over a year after the defeat of his pet candidate, Landon, Mr. Roberts threatens to abandon politics for breeding race horses.

The Duchess of Westminster, who sails today on the Europa, has jumped into New York cafe society with both feet. At the dance she gave at Hampshire House Monday evening, there was a mixture of writers, stage stars, dancers and just socialites. Among those giving dinners beforehand were Elsa Maxwell, Mr. and Mrs. Deering Howe, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Strawbridge, jr., Mr. and Mrs. James Forrestal and Mr. and Mrs. Jay O'Brien . . . The Arthur Menken who has been arrested in Nanking for taking pictures for Paramount News Reel is the camera-minded son of Mrs. Stanwood Menken, of New York. She is noted for the fancy get-ups she wears to costume parties such as the Beaux Arts Ball . . . Mrs. James Wadsworth, wife of Representative Wadsworth, will join her husband here January 2. She has been staying in New York . . . Mrs. Clifford Lee Corbin and her daughter, Miss Dolly Corbin, have asked friends to drop in for cocktails on Friday afternoon.

Pettingills Give Dinner for Kin

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Wagner Plan to Move to Paris for Nine Years.

The Commandant of the Navy Yard and Mrs. George T. Pettingill will entertain at a dinner on Friday evening in honor of the latter's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Wagner of New York and Southampton, L. I. Mrs. Wagner has been here for several days, and will be joined over the week-end by her husband. This is somewhat in the nature of a farewell visit for the Wagners, as they are planning to leave shortly for Paris, where they have rented for nine years a house in the rue de la Faisanderie.

Yesterday Mrs. Pettingill entertained at a tea for her sister in the Commandant's quarters at the Navy Yard. The high ceilinged house, with its many lovely Oriental pieces brought back by Mrs. Pettingill from China, was decorated with bowls of chrysanthemums and talisman roses. Mrs. Wagner and her daughter, Miss Margaret Wagner, received with the hostess.

Back From Europe.

Miss Anne Darlington returned this week from Europe to her residence, 1810 Massachusetts avenue. During two and a half months abroad she spent a great deal of the time in Austria.

South African Minister and Wife Hosts at Cheery Housewarming

Sir Ronald Lindsay, Mrs. Daniel Roper, Senator and Mrs. Vandenberg Among Representatives of Various Sets at Function.

By Elizabeth Ford.

With the last chair in place and the stair-carpet nailed down, the Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close yesterday afternoon entertained diplomatic and social Washington at the official housewarming of their new Legation . . . across Massachusetts avenue from the British Embassy.

Calling cards piled up in drifts like a Buffalo blizzard; woodfires crackled through Georgian rooms; social notables decided happily that they had wandered out of a cold world into an interior decorator's dream.

After having been received by their host and hostesses, the latter wearing a wine-colored gown with a cluster of orchids at her shoulder, guests chatted their way through the library to the paneled dining room where the buffet was decorated with cakes, sandwiches . . . and clusters of chincherinchee flowers, which grow only in South Africa, and which had been shipped all the way to Washington via London for the occasion.

British Envoy Among Guests

Among many present were the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, regretting that Lady Lindsay could not be there because of a cold; the German Ambassador and Frau Dieckhoff; Mrs. Homer S. Vera Brittain, English Author, Says U. S. and British Women Must Fight Together to Defend Their Rights Against Fascism

Distinguished Novelist Asks All to Work for Their Freedom.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

"Women of the United States and Great Britain must work hand in hand to defend the progress already achieved toward equal rights," declared Vera Brittain, distinguished English novelist, last night at a banquet given by the National Woman's Party at the Carlton. The affair, which was attended by representatives of several national organizations now working for equal rights—a cause in which the Woman's Party at first stood alone—was arranged in connection with the biennial conference of the organization, now in session at Alva Belmont House.

Women of this country and Great Britain must lead public opinion of the world to prefer free, independent womanhood, rather than the subject auxiliary of the fascist communities, Miss Brittain asserted. She described the effect of fascism in Germany on the status of women, and warned those of democratic countries what dangers they faced from the encroachment of fascist ideas on the liberties insured under a democratic form of government.

Mrs. Stephen H. P. Pell, of New York, chairman of the National Woman's Party, who presided at the banquet, and also at the opening sessions of the conference, sounded a similar warning, urging women of America to awaken to world trends affecting them, and to see that "it does not happen here." "I urge you to interest groups and individuals in joining the vitally important work of pressing forward on every quarter to secure passage of the equal rights amendment in the next session of Congress," she said.

Senator Edward R. Burke, introduced as the second speaker of the evening, outlined his reasons for advocating the equal rights amendment. He pointed out that there still are States in which women are declared by law ineligible to hold certain offices; more than a score in which they are barred from jury service; more than half in which they are prohibited by law from engaging in certain occupations and many in which the wages and hours of work are regulated. There also is inequality in laws relating to establishment of a legal domicile, management and disposition of property, the right of contract and the rights and obligations of mothers regarding their children.

Discussing protective legislation, Senator Burke declared close study of the problem had convinced him that, in the end, it would be better for all workers if protection were thrown not around any special group or class, but around the job itself. "Labor should be encouraged in its insistence and society should demand, that all work, no matter by whom performed, shall be under decent conditions, at a fair wage and for reasonable hours," he asserted. "Many who most vehemently support restrictions on women workers, at heart do not want women in industry at all," he added.

The third speaker was Raymond Gram Swing, whose wife, Betty Gram Swing, is a member of the National Council of the Woman's Party and last night introduced Vera Brittain with whom she was associated in England.

Choosing as his subject, "The Business Cycle and Women," he called attention to the present sharp economic decline and asserted the liberty of women was at the mercy of the business cycle unless it could be made secure beyond the reach of economic forces.

D. A. R. Editor Reports Gains

The National Historical Magazine of the Daughters of the American Revolution has gained 1,000 new subscribers in the last month, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, its editor, reported to the State magazine committee of the District at its meeting yesterday morning at the Continental Memorial Hall. Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke, chairman of the committee, presented Mrs. Keyes for the second time since she assumed editorship of the publication, to tell of its progress.

Responding to a request for a card to accompany Christmas subscriptions, Mrs. Keyes yesterday gave her personal greeting cards to go with those which were received at the meeting of the magazine committee. Beneath a picture of a lovely old house, with the green shutters on small-paned windows swung back against yellow walls, the cards bear the inscription, "My Mother's House," and the dates, "Christmas, 1806," "Christmas, 1937." Inside is a poem, descriptive of the house and the spirit of it—a house that has "stood foursquare a hundred years and more" and which "still stands foursquare as in the days of yore."

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

THE DAUGHTER'S OF 1812 prepared packages for children of the Southern mountain schools at their Christmas party last night—another of the many given by Washington organizations this year at which gifts for others rather than for themselves are brought.

There was a tree and an entertaining program arranged by Mrs. Theodore Tiller, at which Miss Marjorie Webster presented soloists and a reader from her school. The party itself was a Christmas gift to the members of the organization from Mrs. J. Waters Creighton, who was unable to be present to serve as hostess but nevertheless, extended her hospitality.

One of the features of the program was a song, prepared for the occasion by Mrs. W. W. Owen and sung by Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, State regent of the District D. A. R. The words and melody originated in the deep South, with the mountain schools as the subject.

Mrs. W. A. Hartman, chairman of the mountain school committee, took charge of the gifts brought last night and will send them off in time for Christmas. Other charities—the milk fund and Red Cross—will also receive checks this season and the organization has already contributed to the Community Chest. Mrs. Lane H. Scofield is president of the D. C. Chapter.

THE CHORAL GROUP in the music section of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club is gaining wide recognition for its fine work under the direction of Louis Potter. It is singing twice during the Christmas season at a downtown store and has been invited to be on the program of the Political Study Club December 18 and to provide a sextet for the program being arranged by Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson for the meeting of the executive board of the General Federation of Women's Clubs on January 13.

The subject will be "Women in Public Office," and Mrs. Eleanor Patterson will also speak.

"WILL THE AMERICAN HOME SURVIVE?" is the subject of the third in the series of monthly Nation-wide broadcasts in the "Education for Living" series of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. The program will be given tomorrow at 4:30 p. m. over the Blue network of the National Broadcasting Co. Fiorello H. LaGuardia, mayor of New York, heads the list of distinguished speakers. Others are Mrs. Eugene Meyer and Kathleen Norris, noted novelist. Mrs. Walter W. Seymour, of Chicago, second vice president of the General Federation, will open the program with a brief talk.

Women Reject Idea of District Congress Vote

The cause of national representation for the District of Columbia suffered a set-back at the hands of the Entre Nous Club yesterday when it voted unanimously against the plan of the District Federation of Women's Clubs to indorse a resolution from the General Federation to Congress asking for an amendment to the Constitution providing for national representation in Congress for the District. The action followed a talk against such an amendment by Grover Ayres who addressed the club at its meeting at the home of Mrs. William Sault.

One of the reasons Mr. Ayres advanced against a vote for the voteless District was that Government workers who maintain their residence in other States would lose representation there and it would be harder for them to secure Government jobs under such an arrangement. He did not discuss the problem from the angle of the permanent resident and taxpayer here.

The club completed its 100 bags for patients at Walter Reed Hospital and also re-elected all its officers.

To Give Luncheon.

Mrs. Wilton Lambert will entertain at luncheon on Friday at the Washington Club in honor of Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose.

So many fine furs it was difficult to decide — but this Caracul Swagger caught my eye.. Evening gowns galore, such thrilling ones, too — this blue net was my choice. Clever hats are my weakness, and the display was clever indeed. but this tall crown, black felt was outstanding. I sketched this day time dress, because among the many really smart dresses this draped front model was my favorite. To describe one slip would not do justice to the many lovely silk and satin undies. This gold belted, green satin housecoat is typical of the many other stunning ones.

Pitch - Pass - and-Pray Describes Nats.

By Shirley Povich.

Speaking of Sammy Baugh (and who isn't?) there were some other Washington pitchers who won no championships this year. They wore no helmets but it might have been a good idea. Because they were risking decapitation out there on the American League pitching mounds.

POVICH.

We refer to the gentlemen of Bucky Harris' 1937 pitching staff. According to the official averages announced today, Harris' pitchers were a woeful lot. Which, undoubtedly, is not news to Harris, who probably suspected as much throughout the summer.

In fact, though Harris and Griffith Stadium habitues will tell you that Wes Ferrell was Washington's best pitcher last season, the official averages will tell you that Ferrell ranked thirty-ninth in effectiveness among the league's pitchers. The earned run averages, the yardstick by which pitching effectiveness is best measured, show that Ferrell yielded 4.90 runs per game.

Jimmy DeShong was supposed to be Washington's second best pitcher but the sad truth is that he ranked forty-first in effectiveness in the league, surrendering an average of 4.91 earned runs per game. With that kind of pitching from his top two peformers, Harris can readily understand why the Nats were a sixth-place ball team.

Just in case the full significance of those earned-run averages of Ferrell and DeShong is not driven home, then it might be pointed out that Lefty Gomez, who led the league, allowed 2.33 earned runs per game.

671 Sad Sights.

If you've noticed those plentiful gray hairs that have sprouted from the once raven locks of Harris you'll understand that he had many a fretful afternoon on the Nats' bench last summer. Because, aside from his pitchers' general debility, they were the all-fired wildest crew in the league.

Harris had to contend with a pitching staff that issued 671 passes last season, nearly 35 per cent more than the Yankee staff yielded. The thing that gives a manager the least fun and the most pain is the sight of one of his pitchers putting a man on base. Harris was forced to sit through that agohizing procedure 671 times, as we were saying.

The paradox of it all is that Syd Cohen, the Washington pitcher with the best earned-run average (3.11, which ranked him seventh in the league) is no longer with the Nats. For some reason—probably the $5,000 the Baltimore Orioles offered for him—Cohen was dispatched to the minors.

Incidentally, we learn from the pitching averages that the Detroit Tigers had a heluva slugging ball team. They must have had one, because the Detroit pitchers were something less than heroes last year. In fact, they ranked seventh in the league pitching averages, yet the Tigers, you remember, finished in second place.

W. Ferrell Vs. Newsom.

But, getting back to the Nats, there was not a great deal gained or lost in that Wes Ferrel-Buck Newsom trade of last summer. Newsom was thirty-sixth in effectiveness, three places higher than Ferrell. Newsom finished with 16 victories and 14 defeats compared to Ferrell's 14 wins and 19 losses, but Big Buck would rather not have it mentioned that he led the league with his 167 bases on balls.

The Yankees, who were popularly supposed to have won the pennant with their slugging, didn't do so badly with their pitching, it seems. Of the top eight in the earned-run averages, four were Yankees—Gomez, Red Ruffing, Rookie Spurgeon Chandler and Monte Pearson.

Wes Ferrell led the league in one respect—complete games—but that fact is due not so much to his pitching ability but to his hitting ability. Never was Bucky Harris forced to remove Ferrell for a pinch hitter, a move that always threatens the tenure of other pitchers, because

'Max Terrible'--Louis

Champ's Pilot Afraid Max Will Lose Before Title Bout; Sees Kayo for Louis.

New York, Dec. 14.—A jubilant Max Schmeling tucked a check for $39,153.36 in his vest pocket today and prepared to sail tomorrow for Germany to spend the holidays and receive the acclaim of "der vaterland" for his8-round knockout of Harry Thomas last night.

Schmeling's check represented 45 per cent of the gate of more than $74,000 the fight attracted in the face of a boycott by New York anti-Nazi societies. Today, for the first time in more than a month, there were no pickets parading in front of Mike Jacobs' Hippodroms.

The Teuton sails on the Europa tomorrow night. After a brief rest he goes to Hamburg to fight Ben Foord, the South African, on January 30, and then hopes to return here for a third tune-up either in Miami or New York.

Admitting he let the game and rugged Thomas "ride" for a while, Schmeling nevertheless said the Chicagoan packed a wicked punch. To prove it he displayed two badly bruised arms from blocking Harry's pile-driving rights.

"That first right he hit me in the face hurt like everything," said Max. "I kept wondering what would have happened if it had landed 3 inches lower."

Tickled at almost filling the spacious Garden despite the boycott, Mike Jacobs went ahead for the January 21 meeting between former Champion James J. Braddock and Tommy Farr in the Garden. Farr is due soon after Christmas. Braddock has begun light training at Pompton Lakes, N. J.

"We thought Schmeling looked terrible last night," said Julian Black, "and if Louis can't knock him out in two rounds, he ought to go back and work for Mr. Ford.

"Our worry now is that somebody will beat Max and ruin him as an attraction before we can get to him. We've asked Mike Jacobs not to let Max fight again after he meets Foord."

Louis has agreed conditionally to return in February to fight the winner of Friday night's contest between Buddy Baer and Eddie Hogan. Later Joe will be matched for a tune-up in Detroit.

Thomas received $6,457 for his eight rounds with Schmeling, or 10 per cent of the gate . . . Jack Kearns, Detroit promoter, is in town trying to line up work for his young heavyweight, Jimmy Adamick . . . Fred Apostoli, the middleweight, got in from the coast to begin work for his 10-rounder with Champion Freddie Steele, January 7 . . . Bobby Tow, the Alexandria, Va., lad who made such short work of Ralph Carpenter last night, may be matched with Tony Galento in the Hippodrome.

Rialto's Boxing Called Off

Cancellation of Friday's fight card at the Rialto Theater was announced last night by Matchmaker Howard Livingston.

Word received from Frankie Blair, who was to have fought in the feature bout, that he could not be in his best condition by Friday night, forced the action, Livingston said. Blair was scheduled to fight Frank Cinque.

Rather than schedule a substitute bout, Livingston decided to suspend operations until after the first of the year. A show is being planned for January 7, and the importation of Henry Armstrong, featherweight champion, also is listed for some time in January.

Lubseal Meets Regal Quartet

At 7:30 Little Tavern clashes with United Clay Products.

New York, Dec. 14.—Q. What was the best all-America backfield any one season produced? . . . A. The 1925 combination, comprising Red Grange, of Illinois; Swede Oberlander, of Dartmouth; George (Wildcat) Wilson, of Washington, and Ernie Nevers, of Stanford . . . Best we have ever seen functioning for any team, pro or college, is this year's Washington Redskin quartet of Sammy Baugh, Cliff Battles, Ernie Pinckert and Riley Smith . . . Don't overlook Smith and Pinckert, two of the greatest blockers on any gridiron.

Chief impressions we gathered from Max Schmeling's ring return are (1) he still has the most destructive right-hand of any heavyweight, (2) he is as good a fighter as he ever was, at the ripe old age of 32, and (3) there is no reason for "boycott" concern, if Promoter Mike Jacobs wants to conduct the return Schmeling-Louis match in New York.

Whether organized or spontaneous, pro-Schmeling demonstration in the Garden by a near-capacity crowd was as significant as the burst of boos for Champion Joe Louis . . . The crowd likes to see the champion licked and a full house likely will turn out next June to see if Schmeling can repeat, whether the fight is held in Chicago, Philadelphia or New York.

Pacific Coast Conference teams pick no soft touches when they book intersectional foes in football. Next season Stanford plays Dartmouth, Washington meets Minnesota in opener, Southern California opposes Ohio State, U. C. L. A. tackles Wisconsin, Oregon has date with Fordham and California plays Georgia Tech if Rose Bowl business doesn't interfere again.

George White, Dallas sports editor, says weight is big problem for Ernie Lain, sensational Rice fullback. Erne finished high school at 170, was listed at 212 on pro-from this season, but looked all of 230 in action . . . Santa Clara's head coach, Buck Shaw, set a Notre Dame conversion record when he kicked 38 points after touchdown in 1921 in 39 attempts. Shaw was a tackle under Knute Rockne.

If dates are suitable Pacific Coast will be represented after a two-year lapse in Eastern I. C. A. A. A. A. track meet, besides sending all conference team to engage Big Ten at Evanston late in June . . . Tarzan Taylor, former Ohio State player and now line coach at Marquette, tells how team was penalized twice in a row, without running a play, for taking too much time in huddle. Quarterback, when yanked for dilly-dallying, and asked to explain himself, said: "The loud speaker was giving some scores of other games and we were just listening.

Add heavyweight hopes: Roy Worster, 20-year-old 200-pounder from Bangor, Me., who caught Jack Dempsey's eye and may get his professional chance under Old Mauler's guidance; Clint Moran, 210-pound tackle of Tampa University, who won 12 of 13 amateur fights by knockouts and is labeled a real prospect by Tampa Trib's Pete Norton.

Sports Postscripts

It remained for a newspaper man to hit the zenith of Redskins support . . . It was WILLIAM K. HUTCHISON, of the International News Service, who stopped DICK O'CONNELL, publicity agent for MARSHALL'S new Pro League Champions, on the street and placed a demand for two tickets to the College All-Stars Redskins game at Chicago, next September 1 . . . And he'll get 'em too . . . Attention, Boxing Commission: Monday night, a preliminary boxer, BUDDY GRIMES, from Richmond, was fined $5 by you after he had reported late for the afternoon weighing-in ceremonies . . . His excuse was that he had been caught in a snowstorm at Fredericksburg, and although he had phoned he would be late, his excuse was ruled out . . . Last week, another boxer failed to appear for the same procedure, but was not fined, although his excuse, if such, was that he had overslept . . .

Things are happening fast and furiously here . . . Washington, which hasn't had a national champion since it had a vote, suddenly acquired two within as many days . . . First it was the Redskins, Sunday, and then BOBBY MATHIAS, the 147-pound Golden Gloves champion . . . Of course, you've heard that red-haired BOB is a staff artist on this paper, a former student at the Corcoran Art School . . . He's now trying to decide whether to turn pro or stick to his art work . . . They're still talking about that TONY DUPRE-LOU GEVINSON bout at the arena Monday . . . The human interest story behind the news was the expression worn by MATT TWOMEY, pal, adviser and manager of Lou . . . seated at the ringside behind Boxing Commissioner HEINE MILLER, his was an expression that would be hard to describe as he was forced to stick to his paid admission seat, suspended from duties that would have out him in LOU'S corner where advice and counsel were sadly needed . . .

Guess CLARK GRIFFITH probably won't have much trouble with WES FERRELL next year when he offers him a contract calling for a cut in salary . . . although WES headed several league departments last year, most of them were of a negative variety.

(*)—Baugh also received 9 points at quarterback.

Washington placed three men on the 1937 all-league team selected by vote of the 10 coaches of the National Football League, it was announced yesterday. Seven players who made last year's honor eleven retained places on this year's team, while two of the four newcomers were first-year men in the professional ranks.

The Washington stars who dominated the balloting this year were Turk Edwards, who was selected at tackle for the fourth year since 1932; Cliff Battles, halfback, who was chosen last year and in 1933 and who led the ground gainers this season with 874 yards, the second highest total in league history; and Slingin' Sammy Baugh, freshman halfback recruit from T. C. U., who set a new league record with 81 completed passes this year.

Baugh was tied for first team halfback with Ernie Caddel, Detroit, with 21 points, but Baugh also was tied for second team quarterback with Ed Danowski, New York Giants, with 9 points. Baugh's quarterback votes gave him the first team post at halfback.

Stydahar Most Popular.

The largest vote this year went to Joe Stydahar, Bears' tackle, who received 43 points, three more than Earl Dutch Clark, player-coach of Detroit at quarterback, and Edwards at tackle. Stydahar was on the second team last year. Clark, who made first team quarterback for the sixth year since 1931—he missed only in 1933, when he coached at Colorado College—didn't vote for himself, thereby depriving himself of 5 more points and leading Stydahar for the most points.

A new record for consecutive years on the first team was made by Mel Hein, New York Giants' ace center. He received 39 points to gain the pivot post for the fifth straight season. Hein was a former all-America center at Washington State. Incidentally, Edwards and Hein were captains at Washington State in '31 and '30, respectively.

Green Bay players were voted two places on the 1937 honor team. Lon Evans, at guard, and Clarke Hinkle, at fullback, duplicated their performances which made them the best men in the circuit at these positions in 1936 also.

Musso Now League Guard.

George Musso, 265-pound guard with the Bears, made the first team at that position after making the 1935 team at tackle. The Bears, with Musso and Stydahar, tied Green Bay for second place for most players on the first eleven.

End positions went to Bill Hewitt, Philadelphia Eagles transfer from the Bears, and Gaynell Tinsley, Chicago Cardinals' sensational freshman from L. S. U. Hewitt, formerly of Michigan U., also was chosen last year and 1933 and 1934. Tinsley, in his first season of professional

Garrett Up, Scores First Win of Meet

Mutuel Pays $19.60; Anya Wins 1st Race in Thrilling Upset.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town Race Track, Dec. 14.—Tody West, an ancient mare, marched postward today with only one victory in two years to her credit but she was not long in making it two, for she dominated the running of the fourth race, outstanding event on a featureless program. With Jockey Leon Garrett riding his first winner of the meeting, the daughter of Westwick was first out of the gates, first at every pole and first to reach the wire.

While she was being given the usual saliva test, those who invested in her chances were collecting a $19.60 mutuel. Tody West found the fast hard track to her liking and ran the "slightly more than" six furlongs in 1:17.

With ideal racing weather prevailing, a crowd of 5,000 participated in the sport and made Icy Wind the favorite in the field of eight. Jockey G. Napier had the mount and the on again off again rider was off this time and failed to get any run out of his charge in the final stages.

The daily double proved a "two ace" combination. Gonsbaby and Stand By, from their No. 1 post positions, made runaways out of the second and third races, to bring a $27 payoff.

The program began with an upset. H. R. Dulaney, jr.'s, Anya hopped, skipped and jumped the 6½ furlongs to defeat Sea Boy by two lengths. Wanted finished third in the limit field. Anya, capably handled by Jockey E. Kilgore, paid $27.80.

Jockey Napier rode one of his good races in the second event. Aboard the favorite, Gonsbaby, he broke the gelding on top and gave his backers no anxious moments. Purple Sweep and Elsie J. came from far back to gain money positions. Gonsbaby paid a mere $3.60 mutuel.

She was fractious at the post and was taken to the outside where she continued to act up and it took three assistant starters to get her in line. When the break came she wheeled and almost was left standing still. Jockey Root got her away finally and she closed much ground. In the meanwhile, Stand By, an 11-year-old gelding, was setting the pace and had the race locked up. House Warmer and Clymen followed the veteran $13.60 shot to the wire.

Mrs. C. M. Feltner's Easter Herald failed to stop today, taking the lead at the beginning of the sixth race and holding sway to the end to down Lady Beacon by a length. Relativity was third in the mile and an eighth test. Easter Herald paid a $7.

Royal Purchase won the fifth race by a length from All Agog. Running in the colors of G. O'Keefe and ridden by Jockey A. Vessell, the old mare was never headed. Flower Time was third to the $5.20 shot.

Yap's Ping Pong Squad Takes Lead

By virtue of a 6-3 win over the Virginia Stars, Eddie Yap's Washington Paddlers took first place in the Class A division of the Greater Washington Table Tennis League. Cy Ratner's Wesson Oilers and the Ramblers, led by Norman Engleberg, share second honors.

In the Government loop George Clark's Internal Revenue team defeated Agriculture, 6-3, to take first place, the latter team taking second and Procurement third.

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

Here are the horses auctioned today and the prices: Crushed Ice to C. E. Van Meter for $565; Barnstormer to C. Lee for $260; Bokie B. to L. R. Colorbert for $79; Princess Wrack to L. R. Colorbert for $101; Miss Afa to Marie Krug for $260; Engles Boy to H. R. Smith for $50. There were no bids on Easter Herald and the gelding was withdrawn. Jockey T. Atkinson was suspended for five days for crowding soon after the start of the second race. Atkinson was riding Draypan and the gelding ran out at the first turn. Draypan ran like a blind horse and as if he can't see. Atkinson should be excused. I had a letter from Clocker Mike. He arrived at Tropical Park O. K. and reports that practically every barn is filled. He promises to have some good things when the Florida track opens. That remains to be seen. A woman walked up to a selling window before the first race today and tried to buy a ticket in every race. She was surprised when she learned that she couldn't do all her shopping at once. I heard the one today about the fellow who was given a $5 ticket on Sandid yesterday when he asked for Santer and the first-named horse won at a $66 mutuel. He discovered the error just before the horses broke and beefed loudly until the long shot got home. On the train going back to Washington, he explained to a friend how he "picked" Sandid.

BILL.

First race—Poll Parrot has a lot of speed and will make the most of the outside post position if taken off the also-eligible list. Douglas F. likes this course and is a dangerous contender. Dixie Bee may make a money appearance.

Second race—Packaway turned in a surprise second in better company last out and appears to be a standout if in action. Wild Blonde and Anna V. L. to chase the top one to the wire.

Third race—Waugh Scout has a good chance in a field of this sort. He will have no time to loaf, however. Lula Khayyam won a sprint at this track and is dangerous. Take Charge for the show award.

Fourth race—Idyllic, has plenty of foot and may outrun a field of this sort over the short sprint route. Crushed Ice's last was good and this one is due to be a threat. Tempting Witch to take down the minor award.

Fifth race—Kenty appears able to master these. Picks up weight but has the class edge. Cloudy Weather has done about everything asked and should be close at the end. Showabal's last was a beaut.

Sixth race—Pretty Lass gets in here with featherweight and operates at a distance that suits. Mohi has turned in good races at this meeting and is a threat. Story Time won that last impressively.

Seventh race—Early Broom deserves another chance. Can't be as bad as that last. Flaming Belle looms as the one to beat. Shebang will be a factor if sent postward.

Ninth race—If this substitute event is used, I'll take Five, Red Label and Justa Gal.

Best bet—Packaway.

GONSBABY, first away, shook off early challenges of SUNNY HOME, saved ground and held sway under drive. PURPLE SWEEP hung in stretch after working way to leaders from slow beginning. ELSIE J. broke out, went to leaders readily, was bumped in early stretch and closed gamely. WALMISS was weakly ridden. MY GRAND had some early speed.

STAND BY, first away, opened a good lead in first furlong and was kept to a drive, although not seriously threatened. HOUSE WARMER was closest to the pace from beginning and closed willingly, but pulled up lame. CLYMENE improved position gradually and closed full of run. AUTHORITY went evenly and showed good effort. TRUTHFULLY was put on outside by starter and wheeled while breaking with three assistant starters propping her up. She finished with a bold rush. VENNIE H. tired after going forwardly. HOGARTY pulled up lame.

TODY WEST broke on top, was rated along while holding HAPPY HOST safe and had enough left to stave off closing bid of GOLD CROSS. The latter lacked early speed, came to outside for racing room and closed with rush in stretch run. NELLIE Mc. was in tight quarters at first turn and went evenly thereafter. HAPPY HOST stopped. ICY WIND was listlessly handled. SMALL CHANGE had some early speed.

ROYAL PURCHASE opened a lead at once, was rated while setting pace and responded to drive to stave off closing rush of POVEL. The latter, allowed to settle into best strike, circled horses to close with good courage. FLOWER TIME hung in final drive after moving up menacingly. NEDOKAH had speed in spots. TWO BROOMS stopped.

Johnny Allen and Gomez Share American Pitching Honors

W. Ferrell Completes Most Games

Nat Hurler Also Allowed Most Hits, Runs Off Delivery.

By the Associated Press.

Johnny Allen, dynamic Cleveland right-hander, and Vernon Gomez, rubbery southpaw of the World Champion New York Yankees, shared individual pitching honors during the 1937 campaign in the American League.

Allen compiled the highest won-and-lost percentage in the history of the American League when he won 15 victories before losing the final game of the season, while Gomez, also featuring in a come-back role, turned up with the lowest earned run record in the circuit with a mark of 2.33.

Having previously won his last two games in 1936, Allen's season gave him a streak of 17 consecutive victories before Jake Wade, of Detroit, beat him, 1 to 0, with a 2-hit performance in the final game of the 1937 schedule. Allen's new record supplants that of Bob Grove, veteran left-hander, who won 31 and lost 4 for Philadelphia in 1930 for a .886 percentage. As a first-year pitcher in the league with New York in 1932, Allen led the league with a won-and-lost percentage of .810.

Gomez Wins Most.

While pacing the New York club to the championship with his airtight twirling, Gomez was the only pitcher in the league to win over 20 games, winding up the race with 21 to his credit, against 11 defeats. His teammate, Charlie Ruffing, was the only other 20-game pitcher in the circuit, with a record of 20 victories and 11 defeats.

Gomez's earned-run average was the lowest in the league since 1934, when he led the league again with exactly the same figure. Gomez' high hard one accomplished the most strikeouts for the season with 194, which, however, is far below the record of 343 made by Rube Waddell, of the Athletics, way back in 1904.

Following Gomez in the earned-run column was lanky young Monty Stratton, of Chicago, with a mark of 2.40 in spite of the fact that through the late part of the race he was handicapped by a lame arm. Allen, of the Indians, finished third in the earned-run averages with a record of 2.55.

Great single games were contributed during the season by Bill Dietrich, of Chicago, who pitched a no-hit, no-run game against St. Louis at Chicago on June 1, and by Bob Feller, phenomenal Cleveland rookie, who struck out 16 Boston batters on August 25. This was one whiff below Feller's league record of 17 set by him on September 13, 1936, against Philadelphia. Twice during the season Feller struck out a dozen hitters in a game, the slugging Yankees being the victims both times—on August 6 and September 2.

Clint Brown, White Sox relief pitcher, had an interesting year by finishing 49 out of 53 games in which he appeared. He was two games ahead of Johnny Wilson, of Boston, in total games in which he appeared.

Ferrell in Most.

While on the subject of high totals, Wes Ferrell, of Washington and Boston, led the league in most innings pitched with 281, in most batters faced with 1,126, in most hits made off his delivery with 325, in most runs scored off him with 177, and in most runs earned off his pitching with 153. Buck Newsom, dividing his time between the same teams, took the lead in most walks with 167, while George Turbeville, of Philadelphia, contributed a high total of nine wild pitches. Bill Trotter, of the St. Louis Browns, hit the most batsmen—7.

In keeping with his other high total records, Ferrell again led the league in starting and finishing games. In 1937 he started 35 games and pitched 28 complete contests. In 1936 he started 38 times and had 28 full games. Lefty Gomez was second high man in 1937 with 34 starts and 25 completed games. Red Ruffing, of the Yankees, was third with 31 starts and 22 full games.

Completed games on the whole were down in the league during the season. In 1936 there were 585 games in which the starting pitcher finished, while in 1937 this figure dropped to 535.

Gomez led the league in shutouts with six, equaling the performance of Grove in the preceding year. In addition Gomez had one one-hit game, two three-hit performances and two four-hit games. In 1936 Gomez was taken out of 20 games for the peak in this respect, but in 1937 he was batted out only nine times. Dennis Galehouse, of Cleveland, was cuffed about the most in 1937, being removed from 22 contests for the high mark.

This Morning

52 Shutout Games.

There were 52 shutout games pitched in the American League last season and of that number, the Washington pitchers produced only a measly five. Pete Appleton turned in the first four shutout victories of the Nats and Ray Phebus provided the fifth when he beat the Red Sox in his 1937 debut.

Young Phebus also figured in one of the four one-hit games the league saw last season, but no Washington hurler had a part in the four two-hitters that developed. No Washington pitcher was guilty, either of pitching a three-hit game, but Monte Stratton of the White Sox found time to turn in four of that type to set some kind of a record.

Carl Fischer, who was fired by the Cleveland team and later by the Nats, also set some kind of a record. Pitching only two-thirds of an inning for the Indians, he yielded two runs. On that basis he had an earned run record of 27 runs per game while with the Cleveland team.

Nedomatsky And Jeffra Fight Here

Former Maryland U. Star, Bantamweight King, Here Monday.

By Bob Garrison.

Jeffra, the Baltimore battler, who won his title last October from Sixto Escobar on the Carnival of Champions card at Madison Square Garden, will meet Armando Sicilia, the Chicago featherweight, in the eight-round feature.

Nedomatsky, who before being graduated from Maryland University last spring, set the Southern Conference boxing world afire by three times winning conference titles without so much as dropping a single bout, will met Hunter Crostic, of Richmond, in a six-round semiwindup.

Jeffra and Nedomatsky are stablemates and are managed and handled by Maxie Waxman. Heinie Blaustein and Jack Dempsey.

The champion and Ivan "the Terrible," as the boys are wont to call him, have been training together for the past few weeks, since the former Terrapin ace signed with the Waxman-Dempsey stable of fighters.

Ahearn, now with a weather eye on his newly organized competitors operating at the Rialto Theater, debated for some time before selecting an opponent for Jeffra, then decided on Sicilia by reason of the Chicago Italian's splendid performance against Tony Dupre in the little Canuck's first showing here.

For although he was not given the fight by the judges, most spectators booed the decision, feeling that at worst Sicilia should have had a draw. Now that Dupre has established himself in the eyes of local fans by decisively trouncing Lou Gevinson, Sicilia's prestige has taken a sky-high jump.

Hutson, Green Bay ace, gave way to Tinsley on the first team, but was chosen on the second team at end. Other men who made the first eleven in 1936 but were relegated to the second team this year were Ernie Smith, Green Bay tackle, and Tuffy Leemans, New York halfback.

Two players, Ed Danowsky and Johnny Del Isola of the Giants, made the second team at quarterback and guard, respectively, though both failed to make first or second team last season. Ed Widseth, former Minnesota star tackle, now also with the Giants, was the only other first year player who made either the first or second eleven in addition to Baugh and Tinsley. Widseth was tackle on the second eleven.

The coaches balloted for the first and second team. First team selections received five points and second team three points.

G. W., C. U. Cage Teams Play Tonight

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A sudden surge of preholiday collegiate basketball begins tonight with George Washington entertaining Baltimore University at Tech High School, while Catholic University plays host to Hudson College at Brookland. Both engagements start promptly at 8:30 o'clock.

Georgetown makes its debut tomorrow night against Western Maryland, at Tech, and Maryland will get its first taste of competition against Richmond at College Park.

Tonight's game will be George Washington's first formal game of the year, but the Colonials have been trying their new plays and the new rules in scrimmages with Georgetown for several weeks. If they work as well tonight it will be a successful coming-out party, but if anything goes amiss it will be Oriole night.

Baltimore Is Potent.

Baltimore, coached by Jack Ogden, who does everything in sports but fly kites, has a well-balanced band of sharshooters flying its colors, with Mike Pellino in a featured role, Pellino is one of five Rochester, N. Y., boys imported to help put Baltimore on the basket ball map. They got off to a good start, winning three of four games, and hope to add to that string tonight.

Reinhart, however, is sending a potent team out for its first trial, with Tim O'Brien and George Garber at forwards; Arnold Aureback, center; Bob Faris and Jack Butterworth doing the guarding. This appears to be an ideal combination with three veterans to supply a steadying influence, and a couple of freshmen to ignite a few fireworks.

Cards Aim for Hudson.

While Catholic University knows nothing about Hudson, the Cards are taking every precaution to maintain the undefeated status they gained last week by defeating Maryland State Normal. Coach "Pod" Cotton's crew isn't as smooth as last year's team, but it gives promise of getting equally good results.

You are cordially invited to both parties. Bring along $1.10 for G. W.'s game, and half that for the Cards.

Murphy Sets New League Pin Mark

Fred Murphy's 429, one pin better than the previous season record, led the individual high sets last night in the Columbia Heights Bowling League at the Arcadia alleys.

Rolling with the Arcadia team, he led the way to its high team set of 1,844. Linsey Stott, of the same team, rolled 171 for the individual high game, which was one pin short of the season's record.

In the Washington Ladies League, Lorraine Gulli, of the El Gee team, rolled 130 for the individual high game, and Audrey Freschi, of the Mohican team, posted 337, individual high set. The Shamrocks rolled high team game and high team set honors.

Kitty Rawls Sportdom's 'First Lady'

18-Year-Old Swimmer Is Voted Outstanding Woman Athlete.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 14.—Victor in the closest battle of ballots in the history of Associated Press year-end polls, Katherine (Kitty) Rawls, 18-year-old Florida aquatic ace, today was adjudged the No. 1 feminine athlete of 1937.

Winner of four individual titles in a sensational two-day performance during the last national outdoor swimming championships, Miss Rawls took the top berth by a margin of only 1 point from Anita Lizana, Chilean holder of the United States tennis crown, and Estelle Lawson Page, of Chapel Hill, N. C., national golf title-holder.

The 44 sports writers who participated in the seventh annual poll gave Miss Rawls a total of 53 points against 52 for Miss Lizana and Mrs. Page. Eleven first place ballots went to the swimmer, 10 to the tennis star and 8 to Mrs. Page.

Here's the tabulation of poll results (points tallied on a 3-2-1 basis as each expert rated three leading performers in order of preference):

	Firsts.	Pts.
Katherine Rawls, swimming champion	11	53
Anita Lizana, U. S. tennis champion	10	52
Estelle Lawson Page, U. S. golf champion	8	52
Alice Marble, former tennis champion	5	22
Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, runner-up for U. S. tennis title	2	17
Helen Stephens, trck star	2	14
Patty Berg, runner-up in U. S. title golf	2	13
Marion Miley, Western golf champion	2	10

Central High Opens Season With Briarley

By Jack Munhall.

An unusually small and comparatively green Central basketball squad launches a tough 18-game schedule today meeting Briarley Military Academy on the Central floor at 3:30 o'clock.

From the 70-odd candidates who answered the first call late in November Coach Jack Ray has selected 31 boys for two squads—varsity and junior varsity. About 12 boys will form the varsity team but so little is known about individual ability that Ray plans to alternate two complete fives today.

These squads will be chosen from this group: Abe Genderson, John Fanning, Archie Panago, Bill Mirman, Leonard Sokol, Ed Waters, Erwin Orenstein, Aaron Silverman, Lawrence McKinney and Morris Essenstadt. Of these only Fanning has had varsity experience. Fanning, a lanky blond, is the tallest player on the varsity team. He was the outstanding member of last year's junior varsity and was promoted late last season to the varsity.

Fanning is expected to earn one starting position but a keen fight is in progress for remaining spots. Orenstein, a dependable ball-handler, has shown plenty of ability as a floor man and several of the others are good shots. But the key-note of the team will be speed and team work for so far none has appeared to command a starring role.

Despite a none-too-promising outlook, Coach Ray is not discouraged. But he is a little disappointed that a trio of lettermen failed to return. Ralph Matera transfered to Eastern.

The other two are Sam Fox, of football fame, who is working out with the All-Star squad which meets Munroe A & M. in a charity game Sunday and Dewey Poole who is ineligible. Since Fox will be graduated in February and will be tied up with the grid sport until next week, it is not thought that he will be able to get in trim in time to help the team.

Battles, Malone On Capitol Stage

Halfback Cliff Battles and End Charley Malone, potent factors in the Redskins' championship campaign, on Friday will make their theatrical debut.

The two Redskin aces have accepted a week's booking at the Capitol Theater and plan to accept other offers that will send them on tour.

Battles, the league's greatest ground gainer who yesterday was named in the all-league backfield, and Malone, sensational pass-catching end, will be interviewed during their stage appearance by Tony Wakeman, Washington radio sports commentator.

New Orchestra Will Play at The Shar-Zad

Jules Duke Aggregation Will Mark Opening of Club Room.

By Chanticleer.

Jules Duke and his smooth gentlemen of rhythm (or his gentlemen of smooth rhythm, just as you like) are announced as the musical piece de resistance when the Carlton's new Shar-Zad supper club room opens tomorrow night. Jules is not entirely new to these not-too-remote precincts. He has appeared here with Guy Lombardo and Vincent Lopez and their orchestras.

It is reported that the Duke aggregation takes smoothness from the Lombardo style and suaveness from Lopez. Further, it all is expected to fit into the mood and atmosphere of the Shar-Zad room, a new type of gathering place of definite futuristic and modernistic decorative motif.

A definite touch of atmosphere will be Moya, whose interpretations of Arabian dances has been likened to those of Tilly Losch. Moya comes to these jaded shores direct from Hollywood, where she has been showing before the cameras how the ancient Arabians got along without swing.

The Three Ms and Dick Reger and Helen Malcolm continue to draw 'em in at the Ambassador's Hi Hat room . . . Johnny Shaw is adding to his repertoire at the Madrillon through his current radio series at N. B. C. Right now the masterpiece is a special arrangement of "Body and Soul," with Lecuona's "Panama" and "Allegri Congo" to follow soon . . . Big week at the Mayfair where "National Jack Campbell Week" is being observed. To celebrate the versatile pianist's long stay at this popular downtown rendezvous. Travel note: Ray Nelson, one of the three attractions at the Mayfair, leaves for California at the end of this week.

Mogul, that man of mystery, that genial and gentlemanly inspector of inner minds, is back at the Shoreham, holding forth in the cocktail lounge afternoons (4:30 to 6:30) and evenings (10 to 12). Bring in your problems and Mogul will solve them in a jiffy. He is said to be the real goods in the science of mental telepathy . . . Dick Lam, the manager of the Lotus, has gone out into the world marts again and returned with a bangup show, headed by an English act, Siems and Kaye. Siems is held to be the world's foremost sleight of hand performer with command performances to his credit. Also Earns and Armstrong, ballroom team, and the Eight Florenz Girls.

Held over indefinitely now, the Winter Garden Revue at Bamboo Gardens is really packing them in. It has everything—from an elaborate Russian number by the entire cast to a parody on the Florodora Girl. Mary Martin and Russ Cullen make the music between floor shows, aided and abetted by the Cullen ork . . . Brinkley's is probably the best decorated holiday spot in town at this writing. That would be the popular gathering point down Southeast. Jimmy Bright and his orchestra for your dancing.

Sonny Kendis is at it again. This time the marvelous piano-playing maestro of the Raleigh's Pall Mall room is giving prizes to the 12 most charming young ladies to come to the Pall Mall room between now and the Christmas party scheduled for the 22d. From then on the 12 will be known as the Kendis Charmers. Monday night is Candid Camera night—with camera fiends permitted even to climb aboard the chandeliers if necessary to get the "right angle."

A New Orchestra Comes to Town

Jules Duke and his orchestra will open the Carlton's new Shar-Zad room tomorrow night. It is a supper club in Egyptian motif. Below, Sandra Ward, songstress of the King Cole Room at the Claridge.

It provided for payments ranging from $20 to $40 a month until the child becomes 21 if a boy, and 18 if a girl. The child is expected in April.

W. G. Harahan, Head of C. & O., Dies; Nearly 70

Veteran President of Four Lines in Lifelong Rail Career.

William Johnson Harahan, president of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad and dominant figure in development of the Nation's transportation in the last half century, died yesterday in the C. & O. Hospital at Clifton Forge, Va., the Associated Press reported. He would have been 70 years old on December 22.

Mr. Harahan became ill with septicaemia at White Sulphur Springs two weeks ago. His condition had been critical several days.

Twice president of the C. and O. and also, in his career, president of the Nickel Plate, the Pere Marquette and the Seaboard Airline, Mr. Harahan was one of the key figures in the once towering rail empire of the Van Sweringen brothers and for years had his offices in the Van Sweringen's impressive Terminal Tower in Cleveland.

He began railroading in the shops of the Louisville & Nashville at the age of 18, immediately after graduation from St. John's College, and from then until his death rail transport was his work and play.

He rose rapidly, transferring his energies from railroad to railroad. He served as a maintenance engineer for the Chesapeake & Ohio, then moved to the Illinois Central as roadmaster, became chief engineer, assistant general manager and, in 1904, vice president. His father, the late James T. Harahan, was president of the road at the time.

He moved to the Erie, destined to become a Van Sweringen property, and was made a vice president in 1911. Next came his election as president of the Seaboard, a position he held until 1918. He first headed the C. and O. from 1920 to 1929. He was made senior vice president, replaced by John J. Bernet, but returned to the presidency at Mr. Bernet's death in 1935.

Mr. Harahan always believed railroads ultimately would overcome competition of automobiles, trucks and buses, even in the darkest days of the depression. When the travel distance is beyond 100 miles, he contended, air-conditioned passenger trains with few stops are the answer to competition.

By a strange coincidence, his railroading father died at almost the same age as the son, though the father was killed in a railroad wreck.

Mr. Harahan was a native of Nashville, Tenn.

Every Citizen Urged to Aid in Birthday Ball

Many Activities Suggested to Raise Funds for Paralysis Work.

Participation of every American citizen in the President's Birthday celebration, January 29, 1938, was predicted yesterday when President Roosevelt met with Keith Morgan, executive chairman, and Commissioner George E. Allen, executive director of the celebration committee. The events raise funds for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

The Library of Congress, in cooperatoin with the committee, has suggested 'coon, possum, fox, deer and treasure hunts; spelling bees, costume balls, dog show, horse show, auctions and banquets for the celebration.

More than 6,000 committees have been formed in the 48 States and United States Territories and possessions, Morgan announced. Last year there were 3,800 such committees. A total of 18 States have State chairmen; the remaining 30 States, which are more populous, have been divided into county units.

Plans for the celebration in the District, under Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, are being formed on the order of last year's events, when dances were held in all leading hotels.

Navy Man Recalls Pany Reluctance To Take to Water

Annapolis, Dec. 14 (AP).—The gunboat Panay, sunk by Japanese bombs, hesitated to take the water at its launching, an omen which to the superstitious forecast trouble, it was learned today.

Capt. Bryson Bruce, head of the department of marine engineering at the Naval Academy, one of the two American officers who supervised the construction of the Panay and its five sister ships at Shanghai, said:

"She moved sluggishly down the ways. It was necessary to get a tug boat to pull her and she wasn't finally launched until the next day."

Wheat Prices Higher With Corn Advance

Broader Export Demand for Corn and Rise at Winnipeg Helps.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—Corn scored 1¼ cents a bushel maximum upturn in Chicago today, and wheat 1½ cents. Grain trade attention here focused largely on likelihood of decided broadening of export demand for corn from this country.

The principal strength of Chicago wheat prices came from sympathy with corn and with the Winnipeg wheat market, where December wheat contracts ran up at the last nearly 5 cents a bushel owing to scarcity of good grade cash wheat in Winnipeg.

Corn futures in Chicago closed ⅝ to 1⅞ above yesterday's finish; December, 56¾@56⅞; May, 58⅞@59; July, 59⅛. Wheat ⅛ to 1½ advanced; December, 95⅞@96; May, 92⅝@92¾; July, 87@87⅛. Oats unchanged to ⅛ up; rye showed ⅜ to ⅝ bulge. Provisions unchanged to 7 cents dearer.

Lumber Shipments 46 Per Cent of 1929

The lumber industry during the week ended December 4, 1937, stood at 45 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 46 per cent of average 1929 shipments. The week's reported production was 3 per cent greater than new business booked and 2 per cent greater than reported shipments.

Reported production was about the same, shipments and new orders were heavier, than in the preceding holiday week. Reported production, shipments and orders were all appreciably below the corresponding week of 1936, even though the maritime strike was curtailing the lumber movement at this time last year.

$50,000,000 Bills 3.6 Times Subscribed

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced last evening that the tenders for $50,000,000, or thereabouts, of 94-day Treasury bills, to be dated December 15, 1937, and to mature March 19, 1938, which were offered on December 10, were opened at the Federal Reserve banks on December 13.

The total applied for was $153,402,000, of which $50,030,000 was accepted.

Survey Reports Income for U.S. At High Peak

1937 Amount Will Be Only 12.7 Per Cent Below 1929.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Dec. 14.—The national income produced in the United States rose again in October and again reached a new high peak for the recovery movement, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. It amounted to $6,463,000,000 as compared with the previous peak of $6,389,000,000 in September and with $6,149,000,000 in October last year. Moreover, the gain in October over the corresponding month of last year, amounting to 5.1 per cent, was much smaller than in any previous month of 1937.

When the figure for November is available, it will probably show that the national income declined from the October level by more than the usual seasonal amount and that, for the first time in 1937, it fell below the level of a year ago. The prospect is that December will show a similar situation with the national income extending its decline by more than the usual seasonal amount and dropping well below the income in December, 1936.

This year will thus represent the fifth consecutive year of expansion, with the national income 78.3 per cent above the depression's low of $39,545,000,000 in 1932 and at the highest level since the predepression year of 1929. As compared with the 1929 income of $80,753,000,000, the 1937 income will be lower by only 12.7 per cent. The 1937 income will thus represent an inflationary bubble nearly as large as the one in 1929 which started to burst at the end of that year. This helps to explain the development of the recent deflationary movement.

Erie Railroad Co. Seeks RFC Loan

The Erie Railroad Co. asked the Interstate Commerce Commission yesteredy for permission to borrow $6,006,000 at 5 per cent interest from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for payment of vouchers, taxes, principal and interest. The loan would be for three years.

The carrier also asked permission to issue an additional $5,000,000 of 6 per cent refunding and improvement mortgage bonds, as collateral for the proposed loan and to reimburst its treasury for expenditures for additions and betterments. The road already owes $19,552,000 to the RFC and $2,174,744 to the Railroad Credit Corporation.

B. & O. Carloadings.

Baltimore, Dec. 14.—Carloadings on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the week ended December 11 totaled 39,171, comprising 25,836 cars loaded on line and 13,335 received from connections. For the same week of last year the total was 50,397, consisting of 33,556 cars loaded on line and 16,841 received from connections. During the same week of the year 1930, the total was 51,149, including 33,511 cars loaded on line and 17,638 received from connections.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Decline in Small Volume Day; U. S. Bonds Irregular; Wheat Is Firm.

New York, Dec. 14.—Irregularity in commodities and United States bonds and lower prices for the majority of stocks in a turnover of under a million shares brought to a close another dull session. The best that could be said for any market was that the tone was steady, but there was a complete absence of exuberance anywhere and no inclination to increase risks already assumed in investment or speculation.

Although the Japanese attacks on Americans in China were the subject of most conversations in Wall Street, and many persons expressed the wish that something could be done to settle the score, the market took a realistic view of the prospects and concluded that the odds were well on the side of avoidance of outright war. There is no more enthusiasm for war among Wall Street people than there seems to be in other communities, but while economic and political problems at home are depressing influences on markets, the unsettled state of affairs abroad also is a handicap to recovery.

Government Control.

Perhaps a long-term depressant on the markets is that, in case war should break out, the program of the socialistically inclined would receive a great impetus. Outbreak of hostilities would be followed immediately by the taking over by the Government of banks, railroads, steel, chemical, textile, automotive, agricultural and many other industries. They might or might not go back to private operation after a war, nor is it likely that the stock market, which naturally would be closed down or put into a straight jacket, would regain much liberty for a long time afterward.

The only important industrial report issued today was the Census Bureau's monthly cotton review. Cotton consumption in November fell about 8 per cent from October and 20 per cent from a year ago. With consumption on the wane and with a record-breaking crop now going to market, the industry has little hope of any price rise. On the other hand, the low prices in prospect probably will stimulate consumption to the extent of eating into inventories of finished goods. A handicap to recovery in textiles is the unsettled state of the export markets and the shakiness of many foreign currencies.

Business Sags

Meanwhile the sagging tendency of business goes on with little show of concern among responsible leaders of the Administration. Congress is thinking more of adjourning for the holidays and of getting rid of a farm and wage bill (by passing them) than it is of repealing the dangerous undistributed profits tax or removing other barriers to a return of business confidence. Strikes and layoffs are continuing, and to the outsider it appears to be of more practical importance to allow business to go ahead and lift average working hours above the current eighteen to twenty-hour rates in many industries than to force by law a forty-hour minimum.

Gains and losses were fairly evenly divided among standard industrial stocks most of the time, while the main herd drifted a fraction to a point lower. Slowly moving rallies took place now and then, a noticeable one occurring in the final hour of trading, but it was mostly a steel affair, the stock selling above 56 for a fractional gain. American Can rallied a point or two, but Allied Chemical weakened and Western Union declined to a new low level. Telephone sold ex dividend and gave up a point on the average.

Price changes important enough to attract attention of any one reading the stock table were to be found mostly among preferred issues. Some of the losses ran to 4 points or over and a few gains of 2 to 4 points were made. Hershey Chocolate rose 5 points as did Wright Aero. Safeway Stores $5 preferred fell 6 points on one sale to yield nearly 6 per cent. Robert Gair preferred, which broke half a dozen points yesterday on dividend suspension, opened half a point down, rallied 7½ points, and fell back to its previous closing level.

Banking Position.

The weekly condition figures of reporting banks in principal cities in the week ended December 8 were dominated by changes which occurred that week in New York City. They reflected preparations for the tax date financing. Of the $108,000,000 rise in member bank credit, $70,000,000 was in brokers loans and the bulk of that borrowing was for the purpose of carrying February 1 Treasury notes until they could be exchanged for bonds or notes of the December 15 offering. Holdings of Government securities rose $50,000,000, this being the product of increases of $59,000,000 here and $9,000,000 in Richmond, less decreases of $8,000,000 in Cleveland and $7,000,000 in Chicago. The decrease of $9,000,000 in commercial loans was wholly in the New York district. There was a large increase in demand deposits—$115,000,000 here and $95,000,000 for all banks—and a substantial drop in time deposits. Much of the drop in time deposits probably represented disbursement of Christmas club funds which, in their spending, became demand deposits of the stores in which they were spent.

Hope.

A Western small town banker out in the Sand Hills writes: "Business is very slow here at present, the slowest that I have ever seen it since coming to this country. We have had four or five failures in a row and the country is getting pretty well stripped. Those who did have a little surplus have used it up. About the only things that keep us going here are the cattle. We can always depend on plenty of grass for the cattle, even though it does not rain, but we are still hoping that next year is the year that we will get a crop. What do you think that we are in for in a business way? It looks like anything but good from this distance, everyone in this country seems to be up in the air and does not know what to do. There is no use for me to worry, for I suppose the Government will take over the banking business of the country before we are much older."

Ayres Predicts Business Will Decline in 1938

Economic Recovery Is Retarded by Political Difficulties.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Dec. 14. — Economist Leonard Porter Ayres looked ahead toward 1938 today. Both industrial production and stock prices, he predicted, probably will average lower than in 1936 and 1937.

They will be nearer the figures of 1934 and 1935, he said. Wholesale prices, he forecast, also "will probably be lower next year than they have been this year," and automobile production likely "will be smaller by from 25 to 35 per cent."

Ayres, 58-year-old World War statistician who has been a Cleveland Trust Co. vice president since 1920, appraised "prospects for business in 1938" in his annual address to the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce.

"We have all the economic requisites for prosperity," he declared. "Our difficulties are political, not economic. We need cooperation between Government and business. If that can be attained we can have a resumption of recovery.

"It seems probable that the bottom of the present slump in industrial production will be reached in the first half of next year, for operations have been curtailed so rapidly that in many lines we are already producing less than we are consuming. The recovery from that low point is bound to be much slower than the descent to it has been."

Curb Is Irregular In Quiet Trading

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—Curb stocks closed unevenly today, with losers outnumbering gainers. Small changes were the rule.

Metal and mining shares were in the van of shares closing higher. Lake Shore Mines ended at 51, up 1¾, and Aluminum Co., 79, up 1. Montgomery-Ward "A" added 1¼ at 134¼. American Gas & Electric at 28¾ and Pan American Airways at 18¼ were fractional gainers.

Down part of a point were American Cyanmid "B," Pennroad, Northern States Power "A," International Petroleum, and Creole Petroleum. Sherwin-Williams lost 2½ at 84½. Transactions totaled 187,000 shares, against 180,000 yesterday.

Stockholders Vote Proposed Amendment

Richmond, Va., Dec. 14 (AP).—Stockholders of the Southern Railway Co. adopted a resolution today authorizing a proposed charter amendment to provide for the issue of common capital stock, without par value, and the exchange, share for share, of such common capital stock, without par value, for the existing common stock.

The vote favoring the amendment was recorded as 69.95 per cent of the preferred stock, or 419,713 shares, and 68.71 per cent of the common stock, or 892,042 shares, a total of 1,311,755 shares, or 69.10 per cent of the total stock of the company having the voting power. The number of shares voted in opposition was 1,165 of both classes. The stockholders met in an adjourned session of their annual meeting.

Chain Stores' Volume Sales Set New High

Higher Wages, However, Expected to Lower Net Earnings.

New York, Dec. 14.—Variety chain stores continue the upward trend in evidence since 1932, according to a new study in Poor's Industry and Investment Surveys. Dollar volume of ten leading units aggregated $836,478,000 for the first ten months of the current year. This represents an improvement of 5.8 per cent over sales reported in the corresponding months of last year and assures a new record for 1937. Gains in recent months, however, have been much smaller than earlier this year, and in some cases actual declines have been noted.

"From an earnings standpoint, 1937 results will be less favorable," continues the survey. "In the aggregate, a small decline from last year's level is expected. The explanation lies with higher wages and smaller percentage mark-ups on merchandise. However, there will be several chains whose sales gains will be sufficient to counteract lower profit margins and result in an improved income showing.

"Longer-term prospects indicate moderately higher and characteristically stable earning power. Recognizing that further opportunities for expansion are limited, except at the expense of average store productivity, the industry has turned its attention to increasing sales volume of existing units. Early strides in this direction have met with success, and chains now are aggressively enlarging lines handled, eliminating slow-moving merchandise and generally abandoning price limitations. The last step is particularly significant, as it facilitates upward revision of retail prices commensurate with wholesale price advances."

Daily Oil Output Increases 35,301 Bbls.

Tulsa, Dec. 14 (AP).—The nation's production of crude oil increased 35,301 barrels daily during the week ended December 11 to a total average of 3,422,208 barrels daily, the Oil and Gas Journal reported today.

Oklahoma's production increased 4,075 barrels daily to a total of 560,175; East Texas was up 917 to 417,815, and the State of Texas increased 14,703 to 1,319,057. Louisiana dropped 6,995 barrels daily to 239,285. California increased 11,750 to 711,750, and Kansas increased 10,100 to 178,875.

Higher Prices Seen For Private Planes

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 14.—Higher retail plane prices for 1938 were predicted here today by L. B. Manning, president of Aviation Corporation. It is likely that buyers of private planes will have to pay from 10 to 15 per cent more than present prices, he said.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the fifth concert of the Stradivari Bicentennial Festival in the chamber music auditorium Tuesday night, Adolf Busch and Rudolf Serkin playing three Beethoven sonatas for violin and piano: D major, Op. 12, No. 1; G major, Op. 96; E flat major, Op. 12, No. 3.

Thanks to the admirable musicianship and exceptional collaboration of Adolf Busch and Rudolf Serkin in three Beethoven sonatas for violin and piano, last evening's resumption of the Stradivari bicentennial festival at the Library of Congress was a stimulating experience for an assemblage that filled the chamber music auditorium and the lobby. Playing from memory, the executants showed remarkable precision in attack and phrasing, and a consentience that made their readings seem to emanate from one mind. Moreover, their performance was electrifying in its vitality and radiant quality.

Such sonata readings are rare indeed, for they depend upon the perfect agreement of the musicians as to every shade of expression, and upon their skilled adjustments of technique in every variation of rhythm and tempo. In the presence of such confident mastery of means and such evident zest in interpretation, the listener can enjoy the music undistracted by any intruding critical suggestions.

The D major sonata and the one in E flat major are from the set of three composed in 1797 and dedicated to Antonio Salieri, the rival of Mozart and one of Beethoven's teachers. While they abound in freshness and vigor, they have so much of an eighteenth century atmosphere that they sound definitely dated to our ears. But their formality in no way affects their fine balance as true duets for the instruments each of which has its proper share.

The opening statement of the tonic chord in the D major sonata is typical of the period, but the opening of the development section, with its sudden step into F major and the murmured allusion to the cadence subject, is an unmistakable utterance of Beethoven. The theme and variations in the second movement have poesy, and there is a gay charm in the final rondo.

In the E flat major sonata the brilliance of the piano in the first movement occasionally eclipses the violin, which has its turn in the second subject and in the beautiful episode in C flat major. The adagio is one of the finest of Beethoven's so-called first period, a sustained, noble and eloquent song. The rondo comes back to mundane merriment with a Mozartian liveliness.

Last and loveliest of Beethoven's works in this form, the G major sonata, was written in 1812 for the French violinist Pierre Rode, who was sojourning in Vienna. A hint in one of Beethoven's letters to the Archduke Rudolph leads one to believe that to Rode's style of playing we owe something of the sonata's calm, almost ethereal beauty.

'King' May Return

Island kingdom he ruled for six years, with primitive blacks as subjects, may be visited by Faustin Wirkus, a New York broker and former marine, whose adventures began when he left home in his 'teens.

Nobleman Wins Nonsupport Suit Against Mother

Vienna, Dec. 14 (AP).—Leopold Marie Alphonse, 40, Archduke of Austria and Knight of the Golden Fleece of the Holy Roman Empire, today won a suit against his mother, Archduchess Blanka, for a weekly allowance of $25.

A court ordered the archduchess—who had been giving him a room, food and 95 cents daily because he was a "wastrel"—to pay him for three years.

To qualify, the court said, the archduke must leave his mother's palace by noon tomorrow and never ask her for more money.

Girl Slayer of Child Indicted on 3 Counts

Philadelphia, Dec. 14 (AP).—Mary K. O'Connor, 19-year-old physical education student, was indicted today on charges of murder, voluntary and involuntary manslaughter in the death of Nancy Glenn, 5.

The child was found dead lying face down in a mud puddle in a dirt road near her home last Labor Day. Miss O'Connor is free in $5,000 bail.

Town Meeting Votes to Bar Summer Camp of Nazi Bund

By the United Press.

Southbury, Conn., Dec. 14.—Just as their ancestors met to devise ways of fighting the Indians, the citizens of Southbury assembled today in an old-fashioned New England town meeting and passed an ordinance designed to prevent the German-American Bund, a pro-Nazi organization, from establishing a summer camp here in the Connecticut hills.

The rabbit hunters came in from the woods; the village doctor was there; laborers spoke their minds and a minister presided.

Some of them quoted the Bible to prove their points and at one time the first selectman of Southbury threatened to throw the village carpenter out of the meeting for not sticking to the truth.

This was the issue: The German American Bund purchased 178 acres of land inside the town limits of Southbury and began to plan a camp. A zoning commission was appointed and it drew up a set of regulations zoning the town and making it impossible for the Nazis to build cabins and stage drills on their land.

The town meeting was called to vote on the regulations, and when the last crumpled ballot had been hauled out of a cardboard carton labeled "Fresh ripe tomatoes," the vote stood 142 to 91 in favor of the zoning ordinance. No member of the German-American Bund was present.

After the Rev. M. E. Lindsay, a congregational minister, had been elected chairman, Ewing Barclay, the town carpenter, demanded the floor. He said the ordinance was "undemocratic, un-American, discriminatory, confiscatory and vicious."

"If you don't stick to the truth," yelled J. Edward Coer, first selectman, of Southbury, "I'll throw you out of here."

Barclay yelled back at him and began quoting the Bible.

"In the twenty-fifth chapter of Genesis," he said, "it tells the story of how Esau sold his birthright for a mess of pottage. That's what we would be doing if we passed the zoning ordinance. Why, this ordinance says you can't burry a person in a cemetery without giving 15 days notice to the zoning commission."

A dozen people yelled, "That's not true," and Barclay sat down.

Gregory Cassidy, Democratic town chairman, said:

"They say if you don't zone the town the Germans will get you," he said. "That's not so. As long as the great Franklin D. Roosevelt is in the White House he will protect us."

Republicans booed.

Bob Burns Says—

Out here in Hollywood not long ago, a lady divorced her husband so she could marry a rich man and the rich man gave the husband a hundred thousand dollars to mend his broken heart.

It reminds me a lot of the time my Cousin Orchie met a married lady and they fell in love. She told Orchie if he could get her husband to divorce her, she'd marry him. So Orchie went like a man and spoke to the husband about it.

When he come back to her, she says "Well, did my husband carry on much?" and Orchie says "Yes—he said he was gonna feel the loss terribly, but I squared it with a good cigar!"
